WALL STREET buys and sells two million shares a day now, and nobody notices it. We quickly get used to prosperity. Brokers would consider a "million-share day" an insult. But call money, with which banks gamble, went to five and a half per cent. yesterday. A few days ago it was two and a half. Wall Street does notice that it's rather sad to pay for gambling money as high an interest rate as merchants and manufacturers have to pay for legitimate business loans.

THE REAL stock gambling will begin after the New Year. Then look out for skyrocketing, to be followed by some falls that will make the speculators know just how Humpty-Dumpty felt.

SENATOR UNDERWOOD, and others, whose pure, innocent souls are above mere profit, might like to know something about the value of power shares, and what it would mean to the General Electric Company if kind Mr. Underwood should make the General Electric the private owner of Uncle's Sam's plant at Muscle Shoals.

TAKE ONE little tight and power investment made by the far-seeing B. F. His wife asked him to invest for her $10,000. He paid $9,300 for $10,000 par value of power bonds. They carried the right of exchange for common stock at par. He exchanged the $10,000 bonds for 100 shares of common stock. The company issued ten shares of stock for one.

The $10,000 investment could have been sold yesterday for $69,500. You'll admit that properties going up like that are really too good for Uncle Sam to keep.

ON NEW YEAR'S Eve the old Liberty Bell in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, will ring 148 times, once for each year in the life of this nation. And the radio will carry the sound of the bell all over the land and across the water. That would interest intensely two men that signed the Declaration, Jefferson and Franklin, both interested in science. Both had genius, but neither could have imagined the radio, except as a random guess. Even genius cannot think very far ahead of its own period.

HUB POLICE CLAMP LID ON HOTEL LIQUOR FOR NEW YEAR'S EVE

What is believed to be the most drastic police order ever issued in Boston for the curbing of New Year's eve celebrations was issued today to the commanding officers of all police divisions by Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson.

If the orders are carried out to the letter it will mean that in every hotel, cafe and restaurant police officers will have to not only smell of every ginger ale bottle and coffee and tea cup, but will have to minutely examine every check brought by the waiter to every paying customer.

And if you happen to be in a restaurant where someone is caught buying a little New Year's Eve cheer of the anti-Volstead brand you are likely to be called upon to give your name and address to the police, who will want you as a witness—if you have seen what they have.

TO WATCH LIQUOR

The order directs the commanding officers of the various divisions in which there are bonded hotels, cafes and restaurants to "carefully observe, or have observed, conditions on December 31, New Year's Eve, and ten days before and after."

SAVE NINE CHILDREN AT FIRE IN CONCORD

Three horses were burned to death and nine children were saved, one by a thrilling rescue today, when fire destroyed the house and barn of Salvatore Albano on Lexington street, Concord.

Following discovery in the barn ruins of two alleged whiskey stills, State and town police started an investigation.

The flames started in an ell of the farmhouse. In the house asleep at the time were Mr. and Mrs. Salvatore Albano and their three children, Eleanor, Louis and Gilda, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Albano and their six children, Frances, Doris, Silvanina, Louis, Frank and Joseph.

The four parents gathered the

WILL CALL WILBUR TO GIVE FACTS ON NAVY

Washington, Dec. 30.—Investigation into the needs of the navy was decided upon today by the House Naval Committee at a stormy session.

A motion was adopted to call Secretary Wilbur before the committee January 8, to make such recommendations as he might deem expedient.

Chairman Butler announced that during the discussion he had been informed unofficially President Coolidge expected a conference to be held within a year looking to the further naval disarmament.

It was at the suggestion of Mr. Butler, however, that the motion for an inquiry was made. The chairman said he supported such a step because he had been charged with attempting to override the will of the committee.

JAP SHIP IS AFIRE AT SEA; 181 SAVED

Los Angeles, Dec. 30 (A.P.)—Fire broke o utaboard the Japanese steamer Ginyo Maru and forced seventy-nine passengers and most of the vessel's crew of 103 to take to the lifeboats, from which they were rescued by the freighter Julia Luckenbach, according to radio advices to the Federal Telegraph Company today.

Early reports radiocast from the burning ship said only five members of the crew remained aboard, but later information indicated twenty-five members of the crew had returned to the Ginyo Maru to help fight the fire.

HOUDINI WAVES $10,000 IN BONDS

HARRY HOUDINI AND MARGERY

Man of magic says he will forfeit $5,000 if he cannot duplicate by trick or explain away manifestations produced by "Margery," who is Mrs. Le Roi G. Crandon. The other $5,000 is for a Harvard professor if he will consent to be thrown into the river naked in a packing box.

DEPOSITS BONDS AT CITY HALL FOR DOUBLE CHALLENGE

Harry Houdini, famous conjuror and king of white magic, today cast his deft in the teeth of the powers of darkness.

He placed ten $1,000 bonds in the hands of City Collector William M. McMorrow as a forfeit to be his to take good his challenges to Mrs. Le Roi G. Crandon, known as "Margery," and Professor William McDougall of Harvard.

A committee of twenty-one scientists, psychic investigators, mediums and magicians in equal parts, has been tentatively selected to act as judges.

Mayor James M. Curley was originally chosen as stakeholder, but modestly declined the honor, stating he would get "a good Christian man in City Hall" to take his place.

Houdini drew up an agreement in which he said the challenges were aimed particularly at Mrs. Crandon, he agreed to forfeit $1,000 to charity if he does not succeed, explains or exposes any manifestation or mystery performed those famous in his presence and thereof now permissive.

He further agreed to forfeit a sum equivalent to a year's salary as earned by Professor McDougall, if he can prove in the court that he has duplicate materials to which Houdini has stated his reputation. He said he would deposit the balance of the money, amounting to $5,000, with a notary in more than $1,000.

"I would like the test to take place in Boston, as I expect to be overthere may be selected," said Houdini, "and to take place in any public hall of Boston."

"The bonds to the amount of $10,000 have been deposited with the city collector of Boston, William M. McMorrow, and will upon decision of the judges be paid over to accept

LYNN WOMAN SAVES BOY FROM MAD DOG

Armed with only a broom, Mrs. Edwina Bamford of No. 40 Park street, Lynn, today fought a thrilling battle with an infuriated bull dog which had attacked her four-year-oldson George, and was trying to tear the child to shreds.

The dog, driven from the child, turned its fury loose upon Mrs. Blackford and leaped at her throat again and again. Failing to reach her throat he sank his teeth into her leg just above the knee and tore it badly.

Mrs. Bamford allowed her son to go to the basement to play at noon today. A few minutes after he had gone downstairs she heard him screaming. Rushing below she saw her child on the floor with the dog tearing at the boy's stomach. Seiz-

FIVE VICTIMS OF GAS ARE RESCUED

Springfield, Dec. 30.—The lives of four children and their mother were saved during the early morning hours today when John Morris of No. 39 Sharon street staggered to the door of another apartment in the house, awoke the inmates and then dropped unconscious to the floor.

George Kwolek and his daughter, Mrs. Helen Wright, who had been awakened by the man, rushed to the apartment where he landed and found Mrs. Alice Dennis and her four children unconscious from escaping illuminating gas.

A physician was called and the woman and children, Fred, six, Harry, four, Alice, two, and Jennie, an infant, were revived. Morris, the intruder, was awakened by the fumes and had just strength enough to

U. S. TO PUNISH NATIONS REFUSING TO PAY

Washington, Dec. 30 (I.N.S.).—The American government's determination to collect the war debts owed it by France and other European nations and not to engage in an international discussion of pooling or cancellation, was reaffirmed at the White House today. The intimation was conveyed that if nations repudiate their debts or default, the American government is possessed of retaliatory powers in the way of checking private credits that might prove extremely embarrassing to the countries concerned.

Irvin S. Cobb Isn't Dead "as Far as He Can Learn"

New York, Dec. 30.—Irvin S. Cobb, like Mark Twain, has had the pleasure of denying a story of his death. Mark said the story about his death was greatly exaggerated. Cobb, in a telegram today from Paducah, Ky., says:

"I hate to disappoint anyone, but the Chicago report that I am dead is, so far as I can learn, entirely unfounded."

$30,000 LOSS IN FIRE IN ATTLEBORO

Attleboro, Dec. 30.—Fire of undetermined origin early today damaged the Wells block on Park street, in the heart of the business district, to the extent of $30,000. The block is a three-story wooden structure having lodge rooms above stores on the first floor.

Three stores, the Purdan Confectionery Shop, the Boston Specialty Shop and the Moro Market, suffered the main damage.

Lodge rooms of the Emmet Club, the Knights of Pythias and the A. O. H. above the stores were slightly damaged. There was nobody in the building at the time.

Eugene Dennett, a restaurant worker, discovered the fire and turned in an alarm. The building is owned by Meyer Dana of Boston.

WOMAN VICTIM OF THIEVES VANISHES

Patrolman Nelson G. Copeland of Station 5, East Dedham street, after a chase today through several South End streets, during which he threatened to shoot, captured Roger Babson, 20, of Hanson street, South End. Thomas F. Gallivan, 18, East Canton street, South End, and Kenneth Dinsmore, 15, Maple place, South End, all of whom are charged with larceny from an unknown person.

Patrolman Copeland, who was stationed on Albany street, near Ross street, saw three men jostle a woman, tear her handbag from her hand and run off.

He gave chase, but was forced to threaten the men with his gun before they could be stopped.

with the recommendations of the latter.

COMMITTEES PICKED.

Following is the tentative committee, selected by Mr. McMorrow, subject to their acceptance:

Edwin F. Hatch, Boston Transcript; George B. Levin, Globe; Joe Toye, Traveler; James W. Reardon, Advertiser; Norman Ritchie, Post; Bert Ford, American, and Fred W. Enwright, Telegram.

Father De Hovenda, Holy Cross; Rabbi Tintler; Rev. Herbert S. Johnson; Bishop Charles L. Slattery; Rev. Jones L. Derrick, St. Botolph Club; Rev. Fr. A. c. Conrad, Park Street Church; Rector of the Christian Science Church to be selected later.

Magicians: Eugene Powell, Frits Ducrot, Al Baker, S. Leroy, Sam Bailey, W. S. Davis and J. F. Rinn.

Houdini arrived in Boston on the midnight train from New York, and went to the mayor's office at 10.45. After City Collector McMorrow had been designated as forfeit holder, the magician turned over to him ten $1,000 cooperative stock bonds of the city of York, of which he was given a receipt.

WANTS LARGE HALL

It stated he would hold his demonstration in a large public hall in Boston as soon as possible.

Houdini's visit and his challenge are the result of months of controversy that arose over the proposed award of $5,000 by a committee of the Scientific American, to Mrs. Crandon for genuine display of psychic powers.

Houdini claims that certain members of the committee, of which he is one, have agreed to give the award to Mrs. Crandon, despite the fact that the magician claimed he had exposed her.

Dr. MacDougall, one of the committee, took exception to Houdini's statement, declaring the latter had no knowledge of psychic phenomena. Houdini challenged him to the packing case test as a result, on the theory that if the professor is fully conversant with psychic phenomena he could get out of the box.

In October the magician demanded the resignation from the investigating committee of Hereward Carrington; the former secretary, J. Malcolm Bird, having resigned some time previously.

HOUDINI SUSPICIOUS.

Houdini made the specific charge that Bird betrayed arrangements made in private committee conference, and that records of some of the seances in which Bird and Carrington participated are of such nature "as to have given us grave suspicion."

As a result of his own participation in seances given by "Margery," Houdini said:

"I charge Mrs. Crandon with practicing her feats daily like a professional conjuror. Also that because of her training as a secretary, her long experience as a professional musician, and her athletic build, she is not simple and artless but a shrewd, cunning woman, resourceful in the extreme, and taking advantage of every opportunity to produce a 'manifestation.'

"I think Dr. Crandon believes that deceit and trickery in connection with his wife's powers are equally excusable."

A week ago the magician claimed that the powers of darkness were being called into play by certain persons in a ridiculous attempt to bring about his death.

WILL ARRAIGN 5 BOYS FOR DAMAGE IN SCHOOL

Five boys will be taken into court Thursday by the Roxbury police in connection with thefts and vandalism in the Girls' Normal, Boston Latin and Martin schools, it was stated today. In each case furniture was wrecked and automatic savings banks were stolen in the Girls' Normal and Martin schools. The Latin and Normal schools were entered the past week and the Martin school two weeks ago. The police questioned the boys, whose ages average twelve years, and as a result will start court proceedings.

especially as to liquor or disorderly conduct."

The officers are ordered to report the cases and names of witnesses, if possible, as to all violations of the liquor laws. If sufficient evidence can be obtained of illegal sales of liquor arrests will be made.

The order adds that "if liquor is in evidence the officers shall observe and report the manner and by whom the liquor is served. They will handle all cases of drunkenness and disorderly conduct according to law.

"They will particularly look to see if liquor is dispensed by the management or its agents; reporting the manner of serving, and ascertain if the liquor is claimed as the property of the person served, or if a charge is made for service."

FIRE LAWS.

In addition to the liquor watching activities the officers are ordered to carefully observe if any violation of the fire laws is found. Such violation must be pointed out to the management and if the management fails to remedy them prosecution shall follow.

Reports are to be made in every instance where violations of fire laws are discovered. The reports must be "specific in detail," and forwarded to the office of the superintendent of police.

Officers in the various divisions have been assigned to attend the various hotels and restaurants tomorrow night dressed in evening clothes or straight "civies." A special detail of police has been assigned to the North End.

Destroyers Head Fleet of 35 Boats on Rum Patrol

New York, Dec. 30.—A fleet of 35 government rum chasers, headed by five destroyers, was sent by the coast guard authorities today to patrol nearby waters in a campaign to prevent the landing of New Year's liquor from the 18 schooners and steamers now on rum row. Government officials estimated that there were at least 100,000 cases—and perhaps as many as 800,00—aboard the liquor ships.

WALKING SALOON IS FINED $50 BY COURT

Edward Travers, who lives on North Russell street, spoke his wife's breakfast. Then he goes for a long walk and returns at night in time to cook her supper.

That is what Edward told Police Captain James McDevitt. A few hours later Patrolmen Decker, O'Brien and Cownilk apprehended Edward on one of his long walks and took six pints of liquor from his person. In court he pleaded guilty to a charge of keeping and selling liquor on his person, the first such charge to come within the jurisdiction of the court. He paid a fine of $50.

Beauvais, Stillman Guide, Training Dogs for Race

Montreal, Dec. 30.—Fred Beauvais, Indian guide, feature witness in the Stillman divorce case in New York, is training "malamutes" and "huskies" for the big Winter carnival to be held at Quebec in February. Harry Beauvais, his brother, will drive the dog team in the big race.

The dogs are being trained at Beauvais kennels.

ing a broom, Mrs. Blanchford attacked the dog and drove him off.

The dog then turned on her.

As she stooped to pick up her son the dog made a flying leap at her throat. She threw out an arm and warded him off. Again he leaped and again. Then he seized her by the leg, sinking his teeth through her flesh.

The woman obtained the broom again and started a new battle with the dog. Finally she drove him to a corner of the basement and made her escape with her child.

She was rushed to the Lynn hospital where her wounds were dressed and she was taken home.

The child received no bites that tore the flesh. The lad was dressed in thick clothing an dthe dog's teeth could not get through.

Police were rushed to the house and the dog will probably be killed.

IT'S ALL ABOUT HAM, AND IT'S A PUZZLER

"The Mystery of the Ham" was taken up again by a trial board at police headquarters today.

Patrolman Joseph McCorry of the Dudley street station is charged with stealing the ham from Joseph Popkin's store on Blue Hill avenue.

Popkin identified a ham which was found in the McCorry icebox.

Mrs. McCorry and her husband testified she purchased it at Dewey Market, Roxbury.

The proprietor of the market testified he sold a ham, but, not being on an familiar terms with name as Popkin, was unable to identify it.

CUTTER ON WAY TO CAPSIZED VESSEL

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 29.—The American tank steamer Standard Arrow, reported by wireless today that she had sighted what appeared to be a capsized vessel about 120 feet long, some two hundred miles off Savannah. The coast guard cutter Yamacraw has been ordered to search for the derelict.

BARS HOSPITAL RECORDS ABOUT ELEANOR

The defence testimony of a Springfield police matron and of the superintendent of the Springfield Hospital was excluded today by Judge Raymond in the Superior Court trial of four defendants charged with conspiracy to extort money from Victor A. Searles.

The witnesses who were questioned about Eleanor Barnes were Miss Catherine Sheehan and Dr. John C. Gardner. On objection by District Attorney O'Brien their testimony was excluded and they were dismissed.

John J. Leary, supervisor of the Western Electric Company, testified for Thomas Devine, one of the defendants. The other defendants are William J. Corcoran William J. Kelly and William J. Hartnett. Hartnett, who has been forced to go home three times by illness, was in court today.

Witness Leary brought with him a company file, which showed that a company outing took place on Saturday, August 23, 1920, at Riverside.

Albert Hurwitz, who is assisting District Attorney O'Brien, read into the record the outing program and also a list of judges and starters in which Devine's name did not appear. He had previously testified he was a starter at the outing the day the raid on the Huntington avenue apartment occurred, when it was testified Searles was caught in a compromising position.

Devine then resumed the stand for continued cross-examination.

Daniel F. Giles, a Concord, N. H. druggist, testified regarding the visit to his city of Eleanor Barnes and Blanche Paul.

Giles said he knew the two girls in Concord in 1921.

"They used to come into my store," he said. "Eleanor Barnes asked me if I could put her next to 'some old guy' in Concord with a lot of money. I told her if that was her game she better go back to Boston because there are more suckers within a mile of the Union Station than in whe whole State of New Hampshire."

"BEAVER LAKE AFFAIR."

Asked if Eleanor Barnes told him about an affair at Beaver Lake, the witness said she claimed she was being chased by plice of Derry in connection with an affair in Manchester. She said, according to the witness, that a man gave her money to buy silk stockings and she ran out the rear door of the store without making the purchase.

Giles also said Eleanor Barnes claimed she was being pursued by her husband, by Watch and Ward agents and by reporters about a badger game in Boston.

The witness said that on Labor Day, 1921, Hartnett, whom he had known before, drove up to his store with the two girls and other men. They wanted a lodging house, he said, and he directed them to one. He said Blanche Paul once asked him to hide her because a man from Methuen was after her.

RICH ORPHAN'S DEATH HELD NATURAL

Chicago, Dec. 30.—Although the incomplete report of coroner's chemists who examined the vital organs of William McClintock, "millionaire orphan," was kept secret by Coroner Oscar Wolf, it was reported today that the examination showed death resulted from natural causes.

William D. Shepherd, foster father of the youth and heir to the estate, said today the probated will of Emma Nelson McClintock, mother of the boy, was not the first she had made. The probated will, he said, which made his wife co-guardian of young McClintock with Attorney A. F. Reichmann, replaced a will naming Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd as guardians and conferring upon them a substantial bequest. A copy of the first will, he said, would be produced in connection with the legal action contemplated against persons he said instigated the investigation of the death to injure him.

NINE CHILDREN SAVED AT FIRE IN CONCORD

youngest of the children in their arms and carried them to safety, with the older youngsters trailing along behind. The flames had made great progress and the house was a roaring furnace when a checkup was made and one child found missing.

Alfred P. Loftus, of Concord, brother of Dick Loftus of the Brooklyn Dodgers, heard a child scream. He dashed through the flames and mounted the stairs with flames leaping out on all sides. In a closed bedroom he found the trapped child.

Grabbing it in his arms he started for the lower floor. Just then one of the walls caved in and falling timbers cut a deep gash in his cheek. His hat was knocked off and the flames set fire to his hair. He picked up his hat, crushed out the flames and staggered down the stairs with the child in his arms.

Meanwhile the flames had spread to the barn nearby. Neighbors were working frantically in an effort to get the live stock out. Eleven cows were driven out, but the three horses refused to move. Finally, driven out by the flames, the would-be rescuers abandoned the horses.

When the flames had been extinguished, State police and local officers started searching the ruins. In the ruins of the barn two alleged 100-gallon whiskey stills were found, along with 100 empty one-gallon alcohol cans. Scattered about the yard and nearby fields police say they found about fifty more alcohol one.

Police later searched the house believing another still may have caused the fire.

BETTY RUBIN.

Brother and Sister to Be Married at a Double Ceremony

While seated on cushions has many a romance had its inception, not to find romance while making cushions for a livelihood is quite another story. Yet it was while working at his trade at the Artcraft Upholstering Company, No. 39 Green street, that Hyman Rubin, 24, of No. 196 Chambers street, met, added, wooed and won, pretty Bertha Sarah Warshauer, 21, of No. 529 Harvard street, Dorchester.

To make the affair a trifle more interesting, and perhaps a bit more romantic, his only sister, Betty, 19, a saleogirl at one of the large department stores, decided she and William Stair, 23, of No. 20 Elaton street, would announce their engagement at the same time her brother did, which was duly done.

A double wedding is planned for during the month of bridal," and although she is to lose her only daughter and her oldest son, Mrs. Rubin, mother of Hyman and Betty, appears to be the happiest of them all. She informed the American reporter that she will make her home with her daughter, as will her other son, Sam, 15.

Prior to the culmination of their romances, there was much sadness in the lives of the cushion-maker and his bride-to-be.

Bertha was born in Volin, Northern Russia, where her father was a prosperous merchant. But during the World War dark days came upon the family, and, as were many thousands of that country, they were obliged to suffer.

One night in November, 1916, a band of "Red" bandits came into Volin and demanded of the Warshauer family gold and jewels. Unable to meet the demands, the bandits seized the youngest son, Jack, and carried him away. Stricken by grief, the father died the following year, and the mother passed away a few months later.

In April, 1923, Bertha arrived in this country and made her home with her sister, Mrs. Joseph Green, of No. 529 Harvard street, Dorchester.

CONNECTICUT TO HALT TROLLEYS FOR ECLIPSE

New Haven, Ct., Dec. 30.—At the request of Professor E. W. Brown, who will be in charge of the Yale Astronomic Observatory here on January 24, the day of the total eclipse of the sun, President Lucius H. Storrs of the Connecticut Company agreed to halt all trolley car traffic in the State during the period of totality of the eclipse in order that everyone who happens to be a trolley car passenger at the time will have an opportunity to view the phenomenon.

ONE-ARMED AUTOIST IS KILLED BY TRAIN

West Barnstable, Dec. 30.—Frederick O. Brown, fifty-five years old, retired shoe manufacturer and owner of a large estate at West Barnstable, was instantly killed when the Boston-bound train struck his machine at a crossing between here and Barnstable.

Mr. Brown had only one arm.

MURDER SEEN IN DEATH OF AUTOIST

Norwell, Dec. 30.—The disappearance of a pocketbook and the unusual position in which the car of William H. Ilsley lay when his body was found frozen near his automobile have injected the elements of a murder mystery into the case.

At first it was believed Ilsley froze to death while remaining a flat tire at a lonely spot on Plain street. There was a mark on the back of commission merchant's head, believed to have been caused when he fell.

State police have learned, however, that Ilsley's cap lay on the running board of his car, behind an open door. Ilsley did not put the cap there, the police say, while the man's pocketbook, which he had when he left home, is missing.

In addition, an autopsy has shown that the man died from concussion of the brain.

Police believe that Ilsley may have stopped to fix a tire and been struck over the head by a bandit and his money taken.

2 PEDESTRIANS HURT AS AUTO GOES WILD

John Brewster of No. 41 Bowdoin street, West End, failed to make the turn into Causeway street with his automobile, while driving toward the North Station.

His car struck a sedan parked along the curb, shoving the sedan into the front of Max Wilfanda pool and lunch room, injuring two pedestrians, who were caught in the wreckage.

Henry Patterson of No. 24 Putnam street, Somerville, and James Mcinnedi of No. 28 Battery street, North End, were the pedestrians hurt.

TWO SENTENCED FOR LARCENY OF CLOTH

Salem, Dec. 30.—John Williams and Frank Daniels were sentenced to four months each in the House of Correction in District Court today after pleading guilty to a charge of larceny. The men stole two bolts of cloth from Louis Gilman, Lafayette street tailor. The theft was discovered when a bolt slipped from beneath Williams' overcoat as the pair were leaving the store.

TRAIN HITS AUTO AT LEE; TWO ARE DEAD

Lee, Dec. 30.—Alden Smith of Lee Technology student, was killed and his mother, Mrs. Ives Smith, also of Lee, received injuries from which she died when their automobile was struck by a Pittsfield-New York express on the New Haven Railroad at a crossing a short distance from the railroad station here.

NEW AUTO PLATES AID CRIME

Will Not Hold Paint and Numbers Will Wear Off, It Is Alleged

The police of Massachusetts, in their war on automobile banditry, and other forms of lawlessness involving motor cars, are facing a great handicap in the State auto license plates for 1925.

These plates, products of the State prison workshops, have been improperly made. In less than a month's time, it is predicted, the paint will be gone from almost every tag and criminals may drive along the streets with impunity—the police unable to distinguish the numbers of the license plates on their cars.

State Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin has commented forcibly on the cheap appearance of the new plates and the poor workmanship displayed in their construction.

ALREADY PEELING.

But the police departments face a problem that is more serious.

Officials at State prison, where the plates were made, say that the wrong quality of steel was used, steel to which paint would not adhere. It was intimated that a poor quality of paint might have added to the general shoddiness of the plates.

However, it has been found that already the paint is peeling from the plates with every indication that a few weeks exposure to the mud and air will entirely obliterate all evidence of numerals.

This, police declare, will be equivalent to every car in the State running unlicensed.

That drastic steps will have to be taken within the next thirty days is evident.

ENAMEL WAS FAULTY.

It is probable, when the seriousness of the situation is brought home to the State officials, that the action of Pennsylvania in handling a similar situation will be followed.

In the Keystone State the auto tags are made in the State reformatory.

Several years ago, after a million plates had been distributed, it was found that the enamel on the plates was improperly baked. The result was that after a few weeks use the enamel on the tags was so badly chipped the numbers on the plat s were indistinguishable.

PLATES QUICKLY REPLACED.

The Pennsylvania Highway Department, charged with enforcement of the automobile laws, issued notice that car owners driving machines with license plates on which the numbers were indistinct, would be arrested and fined.

Motorists who received the faulty plates were ordered to notify the authorities immediately, and duplicate plates of sound construction were furnished as quickly as possible.

But few arrests were necessary and practicaly all the unsound plates were replaced before the Spring traffic was well under way.

BANDIT FORCES TAXI MAN TO GUIDE HIM

Forced by a well-dressed gunman to tour the city of Lynn in search of "a couple of good gas stations" to hold up, was the experience of Judd King of No. 51 Sachem street, Lynn, a taxi driver.

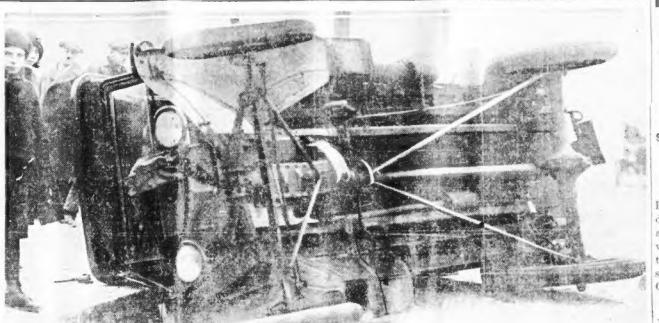
When the ride of a dozen miles was ended, the gunman relieved King of $5 and fled leaving a bill total recorded on the meter of the cab.

COUZENS BILL WOULD END PATRONAGE HABIT

Washington, Dec. 30.—With the scorn of a business man for political wire pulling, Senator Couzens, millionaire Michigan Senator, has introduced an Anti-Patronage bill. A lingering death is freely predicted for it.

The bill would fix a maximum penalty of $1,000 as a fine and six months' imprisonment for any senator, Representative or other official who thus uses his influence to get another man an appointive job.

BIG AUTO HURLED 50 FEET IN CRASH



VIEW OF TRUCK OVERTURNED IN SOUTH BOSTON COLLISION

Photo shows vehicle as it looked after being hurled a distance of fifty feet when struck by a Neponset-bound trolley car. Three men on the truck escaped injury by jumping. The truck is owned by Morris Helpine of Dorchester. Forty passengers on the trolley received a shaking up when the crash came. The auto came within a few feet of plunging forty feet down an embankment of the Locust street playground.

40 SHAKEN UP AS TROLLEY HITS TRUCK

More than forty persons miraculously escaped injury today when a Neponset-bound Elevated car crashed into a heavy truck on Dawson street, South Boston, and hurled the machine a distance of fifty feet.

Passengers in the car, which was crowded at the time, were shaken up by the collision. Three men, riding in the seat of the truck, escaped injury by jumping as their machine turned over.

The truck, a two and one-half-ton vehicle, was owned and driven by Morris Halpine of Dorchester, according to Dorchester. With him at the time were two assistants.

Had the truck been tossed five feet more it would have come over the edge of an embankment with a drop of forty feet to the Locust street playground.

'HOPE YOU DIE,' SON TELLS FATHER AFTER SHOOTING

Johnstown, N. Y., Dec. 30.—"I hope you die."

Stumbling forward in the arms of two policemen, William L. Baker leaned over a stretcher bearing the body of his father, Daniel E. Baker, and, it is charged, shouted that farewell message of hate into his parent's face.

"I hope you go to the electric chair for this."

It is declared this was the dying father's answer. Daniel Baker, who had won his own son's wife and married her after she had divorced the younger man, had been shot and wounded five times by his infuriated son. The parent died in Nathan Littauer Hospital Gloversville. The son is in Johnstown jail charged with first degree murder.

AUTO DEATH LAID TO BLINDING LIGHTS

North Attleboro, Dec. 30.—Michael J. Conley, sixty-two years old, of No. 20 Gaylord street, Roxbury, was killed here when the automobile driven by his son-in-law, Frank Jerryo, and in which Conley was riding, crashed into a standing motor truck.

Jerryo, who was not seriously hurt, was held by the police when they said, they found fifty-six gallons of alcohol in the wrecked machine. The charge brought was illegal transportation. Blinding lights on a passing car was blamed for the collision.

COUPLE ARE FOUND DEAD AMONG XMAS GIFTS

Hollywood, Cal., Dec. 28.—The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Holly, said to have been well-to-do former residents of New York, were found in their bungalow here lying in the midst of Christmas decorations and presents, the cause of their deaths a mystery.

They apparently had been dead since Christmas night, when they last were seen by Theodore Covel, a nephew. Covel secured a police theory that Holly and his wife had ended their lives with poison.

HARDING'S FRIEND REJECTED

Spurned Fiance Still Tagging Betty Winslow as She Leaves Hub

The icy blasts sweeping over Boston from the West have done more than cause suffering and distress — they have wrecked, at least temporarily, the romance of a New York stage beauty and a prominent Ohio politician.

"I got cold feet."

This is the explanation Betty Winslow, demure, blond understudy in "Mme. Pompadour," gave as she boarded a train at South Station after refusing almost in the shadow of the altar to become the bride of Carl E. Moore.

The couple came here earlier in the day for the express purpose of being married. Miss Winslow's mother, Mrs. S. N. Hartigan, a resident at Boston, wished to be present at the ceremony.

Moore came here from Washington by way of New York.

It was arranged to go to City Hall, secure a license, then a waiver of the five-day law and have the ceremony performed as quickly as possible.

But a look of uncertainty, which had been present on the face of the stage beauty when she boarded the train in New York, grew more pronounced as the couple approached City Hall.

"I—I guess maybe we'd better wait a little," she finally faltered to the surprised bridegroom-to-be.

FIRE IN BOWLING ALLEY CAUSES $400 DAMAGE

Fire of undetermined origin caused damage estimated at $400 at the Boston Bowling Alleys on the third floor of No. 167 Washington street early today.

The blaze was discovered by Fred Bartelelsky, janitor, who smelled smoke when he opened the building. The fire started under one of the alleys and spread to a second.

Firemen were forced to chop away the alleys to get at the flames.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—Alarmed when no word was received from the lake ship Wisconsin, which has been stuck in the ice off Holland, Mich., since Saturday with sixty persons aboard, the Goodrich company dispatched the steamship Alabama to the rescue.

The commander of the rescue ship was instructed to bring the sister ship through the ice if possible; otherwise, to take off the crew and passengers and bring them to shore.

JACKSON FAILS TO LEAVE HOSPITAL

Accused Treasurer Must Remain as a Patient for a Day or Two More

The discharge from the City Hospital of Caleb S. Jackson, who confessed to misappropriating $43,000 of the funds of the Eastern Mutual Insurance Company, was again postponed today.

As a result of a physical examination made by physicians, Dr. Edmund Wilson, assistant superintendent of the hospital, declared Jackson's condition would not permit his release for a day or two longer.

Police Inspector Thomas Towle is waiting to arrest Jackson on a warrant charging larceny as soon as he is discharged from the hospital.

On Sunday Jackson was examined by three alienists, who pronounced him to be sane.

HOSPITAL FIRE MENACES 25 PATIENTS

Blaze Burns Out Wires in Lynn, but Shift of Wind Saves Building

Twenty-five patients in the Lynn Contagious Hospital were wrapped in blankets ready to be moved from the institution as fire destroyed the hospital laundry building.

The fire burned the electric feed wires running into the hospital and the building was in darkness, but there was no excitement. The wind "veered" and the hospital was untouched by the fire.

An overheated boiler is believed responsible for the fire, which causes a loss of $2,000.

Social Set Prepares for Gay Events Marking Arrival of New Year

By BETTY ALDEN.

THE tinkle of the bells on old Santa's sleigh have died away—but the sound of the flute in honor of New Year's Eve is almost at hand.

The breathing space between the two holidays is a brief one, though too festivities need to celebrate the entrance of the year of our Lord, 1925, are of a much more public nature than those held on Christmas.

As usual, a number of Boston's fashionable colonists are going over to Manhattan to participate in the gay celebrations held on the eve of the new year.

WHICH reminds me that several Bostonians have already gone on to Gotham for the ball which Robert Wilson is staging this evening for his debutante daughter, Miss Grace Wrenn.

The former's late mother was formerly Miss Grace Dabney of Boston. Mr. Wrenn, a member of the Harvard, '98 class, belongs to the Tennis and Racquet Club here.

Miss Grace, who attended Westover School in Connecticut, is one of Manhattan's most widely-feted buds.

APROPOS of the fashionable worlds activities in Gotham, there is a Boston interest in the benefit which the Duchess de Richelieu is arranging for Sunday evening, January 25.

Not a little mystery and anticipation surround the affair, which is to be held in a New York theatre for the benefit of the City Music Hall.

There is to be a League of Fashions, a sartorial extravaganza, in which the belles of society will be arrayed in gorgeous regalia to represent the various nations.

After this, the audience is to be taken on a "trip" to Palm Beach by way of a three-act comedy. George Campbell is the author, but the nature of the play is being kept a deep dark secret.

James Lowell Putnam, a former Bostonian and member of the Tennis and Racquet Club here, belongs to the "company" formed by the Duchess de Richelieu. Rosbanara, the dancer, is to have general charge of the stage, with Grace Mitchell as associate.

Of the smart folk who have already obtained their "accommodations" for this musically top are Mrs. Edmund L. Baylies.

IF the younger set of Boston has had no opportunity to try out the large, shiny skis which Kris Kringle left for them a few weeks ago on Berkshire Hills top, there are many of Winter sports.

Dancing with double rippers, deadhead skating competitions, a fascinating program for the grown-ups as well as the youngsters, and not a few smart folk are spending the holiday season there.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Grafton Minot of Boston are at the Lenox Club in Lenox, where Mr. and Mrs. William Griswold of New York are giving a jolly ball on New Year's Eve.

An extra supply of cordwood has been brought down from the hills for the great fireplaces in the clubhouse, and the ballroom has been decorated with Christmas greens and garlands. Mr. and Mrs. C. Minot are occupying one of the cottages at "Wyndhurst," as their large estate is known.

Mrs. Frederic Schenck of Boston is at "Spring Lawn," the Lenox estate of her mother, Mrs. John S. Sheridan, who is keeping her cottage open all Winter. Also at "Spring Lawn" for the holidays are her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Hayard Cushing Hopgin.

Mrs. Winthrop Murray Crane has joined her Berkshire villa on Sugar Hill in Dalton for two weeks.

MILL WAGE CUT SEEN AFTER PARLEY

Fall River, Dec. 30.—The general impression among the thousands of mill employes in this section is that conferences of the Cotton Manufacturers' association and the Textile Council have to do with proposed wage cuts in the mills.

REAL ESTATE MEN OPPOSE SAFETY ORDER

Much Opposition to Council's Proposed Ordinance for Elevator Safety Device

Many prominent real estate brokers and owners appeared at a public meeting before the executive committee of the City Council and voiced their objections against the enactment of a proposed ordinance for better safeguarding of the public in elevators introduced by Councilor McGrath.

The order requires that some sort of interlocking safety device be applied to elevators in use by the public, both in and out of elevators in office buildings and mercantile establishments.

Moriarty told the Post that during the past year four persons were killed, 18 seriously injured and 112 slightly injured in elevator accidents.

FATAL TO BUSINESS.

George L. Dehon, of No. 31 Pemberton square, represented the Association of Building Owners and Managers and said the ordinance was much too severe. He stated no interlocking system yet invented was entirely foolproof. He claimed that it would be impossible to operate business buildings fifteen per cent, and that it would be disastrous to business because of the fact that more people ride up and down in elevators in a day than in automobiles, and also because of the expense.

Former Alderman Francis B. Peters, of No. 199 Marlboro street, Back Bay, said that on all the years that he had had charge of property he couldn't remember any accident of a serious nature in his buildings.

McDONALD IN FAVOR.

Others in attendance were C. W. Whittier, R. H. Stowell, representing the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company; Samuel Plot of 85 State street, R. H. Bradley and H. Richardson.

John C. McDonald, business agent of the Elevator Conservation Union, was in favor of the ordinance and thought that if the City Council passed such an ordinance then the building commissioner would be obliged to enforce it.

Clarence Darrow, veteran criminal lawyer, and Benjamin and Walter Bachrach, brothers, will share the fee.

The lawyers asked for $200,000 at the conclusion of the trial, and though the Leopold family made objection, the Loeb family thought the amount excessive.

Four alienists received $250 a day for their services their testimony disclosed, and ten or more other medical men received upwards of $25,000 for their parts in the case.

PLOT BARED TO UPSET IRISH FREE STATE

Army Officers and Civil Officials Held In Connection With Plan

Dublin, Dec. 30.—It is officially stated today that discovery has been made that for some months efforts have been made on behalf of and by officers retired from the army in connection with the mutiny last March to persuade members of the army and others in the service of the state from allegiance to the Free State.

As a result of the discovery the government terminated the service of a number of civil servants as well as twenty-five non-commissioned officers and sixteen men. Included in the army suspensions are two majors who have been invited to show cause why their commissions should not be cancelled, the executive council having reasons to believe they were in close active association with the conspiracy.

2 DIE AS S'NTA COMES, THIRD NEAR DEATH

Parents, Brother and Own Daughter Are Victims of Xmas Aftermath

The day before Christmas when the parents in the other Frothingham street homes were decorating the Christmas trees and filling the stockings with presents, Santa Claus Green, eight months old, died. Christmas Day, when the other Frothingham street homes rang with children's laughter, Harriet Green, aged two years, died.

And now, in the City Hospital, Benjamin, aged four years, is fighting what is believed to be a losing battle against the dread disease—one of a series in this family—the only child living contracted the disease first.

Scarlet fever took the place of Santa Claus this year in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Green of No. 9 Frothingham street, Charlestown.

Out of the three children in their family, two have died of scarlet fever within the week and the third is lying at the point of death at the City Hospital with the same disease, attending by.

TROTZKY HELD AS PRISONER BY ENEMIES

Finance Minister Warns Deputies Against Binding Agreement

London, Dec. 30 (I.N.S.)—Reports received here today, brought from Moscow by travelers, said Leon Trotzky was held a prisoner in the Kremlin because of his refusal to leave Moscow.

Berlin, Dec. 30 — Leon Trotzky, Russian commissar for war, a prisoner in the hands of his Soviet "friends" and on the verge of exile, was the viewpoint in dispatches from Moscow and reports reaching European capitals.

The Rudder, a Russian newspaper published in Berlin, printed a dispatch from Moscow, saying that Trotzky was held a virtual prisoner after being invited to a meeting of the Council of Commissars last week.

Instead of being permitted to go after the meeting, he was offered room in the administration building, where he was placed under guard by the Cheka, the Soviet secret service.

The telephone was removed from the room and he remains there, it is reported, isolated from his friends and not allowed to receive messages or new papers.

CROSS-WORD PUZZLE FANS! LET "13" BE YOUR LUCKY NUMBER!

START NOW TO SOLVE THEM

Make "13" your lucky number.

Of course, it's a jinx figure, if you get yourself to believe so.

But there's nothing jinxy about today's set of puzzles in the Boston American Cross-Word Puzzle Contest.

And anyway, the only figures that should concern you is the figure you'll put when they start splitting up that purse of $1,000 for the contest's winners.

The pace of the contest is getting more tense daily. Thirteen laps have already been covered since the opening checkerboard appeared, that that hardihan hasn't daunted thousands of folks. During the past few days hundreds and hundreds have written in for last puzzles, saying they were preparing to start shooting for that $1,000 target.

GET INTO YOUR STRIDE.

Two days more and the first half of the contest will be over. Keep digging away at these puzzles as they appear from day to day and watch your skill increase.

Run your glimmers, seniors, over Puzzle No. 13. There's one word there that has something to do with pack horses that may give you a terrible tussle. But pack horses, as a rule, are tame. Don't let this one throw you. Gaze along No. 6 horizontal. Something sweety about that, you think? A silly example to pick out; but the give-away is just as silly. Don't expect many more bargain days, after the Puzzle Editor finishes inventory of his pre-holiday stuff.

JUST KEEP PLUGGING.

Now, to give the janiors a helping bump. The only possible stumbler, and that's doubt about No. 13 horizontal. If you know your early American history you'll recall just what the feuding was that drove the Irish folk Americanward. It's something that corned-beef and cabbage can't be without. Now, skip along with the rest.

Keep plugging away at each day's puzzle and keep them stacked away neatly for the final dash down-wind. If you haven't done it by this time, it wouldn't be a bad idea to get that 200-word letter telling why you like cross-word puzzles out of the way.

IT'S NOT UNLUCKY

THOUSANDS HAVE KIDNEY TROUBLE AND NEVER SUSPECT IT

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Use Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root to soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent life insurance companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common in the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send six cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.

Miss Fern Rogers, another principal, will sing the hit, "All Alone."

'THE FOOL' WINS ST. JAMES AUDIENCE

Stock Company Cast Scores Hit in Noted Drama by Channing Pollock

At last the patrons of St. James Theatre have been given a chance to see a stock presentation of a drama that they have been waiting to see for two years.

That drama which they have been waiting for is "The Fool."

It is the same Channing Pollock drama which thrilled Boston theatre-goers during the season of 1922.

The fact that the original cast does not appear at the St. James does not detract a bit from the offering of the Boston Stock Company. Roberta Lee Clark, playing the part of Mary Margate, is every bit as suitable for that difficult role as the original star, Bernard Nedell, as the minister who forsakes his friends, his station in life and even love is at his best in this part.

"The Fool" is an effective combination of religion, common sense and melodrama. The spiritual part is sounded frequently throughout the play and depicts the power of faith when Mary Margate a lifetime cripple, lays down her crutches during the height of a mob attack on the clergyman, who worked and slaved for the poor, and goes to protect him.

Continuing Shows

MAJESTIC—"Gus The Bus" Musical revue featuring El Brendel and his Swedish dialect.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE—"The Potters." Merry comedy of American family life of the middle class.

NEW PARK—"The Best People." Smart comedy of young people and their distressed elders.

TREMONT TEMPLE—"He Who Gets Slapped," with Lon Chaney in the role of the circus clown.

CROSS WORD PUZZLERS AT STATE HOSPITAL

Worcester, Dec. 30.—The modern cross-word puzzle craze has superceded checkers to a large extent as a form of mental excercise among the less acutely ill patients at the Worcester State Hospital, it became known.

"The efforts of mental excercise such as the cross-word puzzle affords may prove to have a beneficial effect on those patients who are able to solve them," said Dr. Lewis B. Hill, assistant superintendent of the institution.

"Tangerine," a musical comedy by Guy Bolton and Carlo Sanders, was presented last evening by the Somerville Theatre Players. "Tangerine" tells an interesting and amusing story, the characters of which are deftly sketched and highly entertaining and is teeming with captivating dances, colorful settings and tuneful music. The opening scene is laid in the Lodlow Street Jail, that distinctive New York institution that is chiefly inhabited by ex-husbands who neglect to pay alimony.

CAUPOLICAN'S VOICE THRILLS AT KEITH'S

No less thrilling than a McCormack to his last night's audience at Keith's was Caupolican, the Indian baritone. A giant of a man, vigorous and with a powerful voice full of reasonance and high of range, he is as good to look at as his songs are to hear.

It provokes the imagination a bit to hear this native American. He is billed as a chief and one can of satisfying the critically inclined.

easily fancy him in that role in real life.

Ben Welch, an old Boston favorite, was well received in a new sketch in which he is assisted by Frank J. Murphy. Eileen Schofield proves herself to be a premiere danseuse and she is supported by four versatile young men dancers. Fred Heider and Company drew many laughs in their singing and dancing sketch.

The other acts, while pleasing to most of the audience, fell far short of satisfying the critically inclined.

NORA LEE

A Story of Flaming Youth

Heart and Soul of 1924 Flapper Laid Bare in Best Story by Author of "Chickie"

START THE STORY HERE TODAY

Margaret Meadows married Will Lee at seventeen. His dissolute habits soon made her miserable. The night he raised his hand to his two-year-old child in a drunken rage she slipped from his home with her baby. Margaret supported her daughter by teaching school in several villages, finally settling in Floridale, where she met Andrew and they fell in love. But he was tied to an invalid wife and Margaret refused to let him leave her. Nora, at seventeen, fell in love with Dane Herrick. Andrew says good-by to Nora Lee and gives her a packet of bonds. He is killed in an auto accident, and his widow demands the bonds of Nora. Nora meets Maxwell Reed, who makes love to her. Margaret dies and Nora is left alone. Andrew's widow accuses Nora of stealing the bonds. Nora bears a discussion of life as seen by the modern flapper.

NOW CONTINUE THE STORY

By ELENORE MEHERIN

THIS afternoon Sally took her place at the wheel and waved gaily to Nora Lee. Nora Lee was spending the week-end with Virginia in Berkeley.

Virginia was engaged. Not to Humphrey Arnold but to a young engineer she had met, loved at first sight and almost immediately the date for the wedding had been announced. It was six months since the January noon of their lunch at the St. Francis.

Nora Lee waited until Connie and Sally were out of sight, then she walked slowly to the safety station and took the car westward. It would be late in the evening before she went across the bay.

She had another engagement first —every Saturday at about this time found her on the way to the workshop on the hill. She said to herself musing: "Well—it's been going on nearly a year now. Nothing's happened. It's——"

Sense of Guilt

She meant to say "inspiring" but the word failed. She felt almost weak and her cheeks were blazing as she sauntered down the block and entered the path where the street lost itself and the forest began. Here Max met her. They would sometimes talk a while and then follow a narrow trail to a side door of the house. It was better. Neighbors didn't need to be informed of their affairs. But it gave Nora Lee a hot choking sense of guilt.

The arrangement had come about without any words. It was not the only way in which their relationship had subtly and radically changed.

Max took her hands. He was pale. His hair and eyes were like polished ebony. "I thought you weren't coming."

"I thought so, too."

"Why?"

She went along, scuffing the dry leaves with her toes, astonished to find her doubts vanishing and a pagan joyousness enveloping her like a flaming tide. She laughed, and added with abandon! "It gives me an Adam and Eve kind of feeling to walk in here. Wouldn't it be wonderful to have been the first man and the first girl in a Garden of Eden?"

"Let's walk then. It's too fine to work."

"Why weren't you coming, Nora Lee?"

"Why Stop?"

She rested her head against the bark: "Is that a wild canary, Max? Oh well, suppose I can't come up here forever, can I? I suppose I might as well stop one time as another?"

"Why stop at all?" His looked up to her face. Both his hands closed on hers. He drew them. They rose to their feet. She threw her head back and laughed and let herself to his arms.

Inexplicable tears were in her lashes when he kissed them. He asked huskily: "Why stop at all?"

"This is why."

"No, no. This is why we won't stop."

Her heart knocked. It shouted to her: "Yes—you know that too! This is why you won't stop."

She gave no answer. As they walked back through the trail her feet stumbled. She said with uncertain mirth: "Have the pebbles removed or indeed I'll never come again!"

At a stunted jack pine they halted. Max turned her face upward and looked full into its blue gaze. "Don't be afraid of me, Nora Lee."

She thought: "Oh this is the tree where I first had the wish that you should kiss me. And a little while afterwards you did. But I am not afraid of you. I am afraid of MYSELF!"

"Why should you fear me, Nora Lee?"

"I don't. But I feel—well— I don't know—nothing when I'm with you. I'm only glad then—"

He gave a soft laugh and said tenderness into: "You are very beautiful. What more need we ask than to be glad. It is the highest philosophy of life."

She closed her eyes: "Yes! I believe it! To be glad!"

And watching up her hands, she drew his head down until he kissed her.

Should a Girl Tell Him?

Nora Lee sat on the prow of the boat. The breeze blew coldly against her face. She made a resolute fight against the misery that now began to trickle drop by drop on her thoughts. She kept before her the image of the wild canary, trailing its music through the trees—beautiful; everything was beautiful. Yet the impulse to obey causeless tears grew.

She wondered why she was so unhappy. A little while since she was glad—tunefully glad. The forest, Max taking her hands, the sun dappling through the leaves—what was wrong in a scene of such idyllic beauty? What was wrong in two people who were young kissing each other? Nothing!

Yet she became confused with heat and faintness. From somewhere as though outside herself came a meaning: "But this is the way things begin—"

She thought with sinking dismay: "I am bad at heart. It must be!" She recalled accordingly that in the last month, when she went dancing at the hotels with Richard, she had ignored and liked it when his lips touched her hair; she had felt a triumph when he swept her in close, momentary embrace as the music ceased, whispering: "I'm bewitched!" That was but vanity, perhaps. Everyone is vain. She could pardon herself here.

Admits Tempting

Her attitude to Max was different. She tempted him into kissing her. She wouldn't deny it. Her arms reached up—not once but several times. She had been glad about it. She thought it a thing of joy—a singing thing. This must prove her utterly abandoned—different from other girls.

She rested her chin in her hands and felt her heart breaking. Staring at the water she murmured in an agony of self-pity: "Perhaps I don't love him! Perhaps I'm incapable of a love like this. I'm a monster!"

She wished to have this last phrase denied; to be told that she was an aspiring person of beautiful spirit. She longed to know what others really felt—not smarty-alec boasting, but the deep, honest truth. . . . Was it, for instance, some girl like her self would stand on a hilltop and let a searchlight be turned on her in most thought and feelings, would the revelation be very startling? Would it prove Nora Lee an unworthy person?

Well, no one would do this, of course. Yet she longed ardently that such a test would find her better and not worse than others. She feared it wouldn't.

"Fire in Veins"

That night she was sitting at a small ivory dressing table when Virginia came into the room. Nora Lee was to be maid of honor at the pretty home wedding. She had never acted in this delightful position before and was ecstastic about it. In two weeks Virginia would be married and Nora Lee would wear the wonderful French dress embroidered in a far-off convent—she would carry flowers—she would feel so solemn and holy.

In the mirror she could now see Virginia's wedding-like face,* with the gold hair in two braids over her shoulders, the blue, chiffon negligee giving a look of unearthly wistfulness. Nora Lee thought: "Oh, you white, angelic thing—what would you do if fire ran in your veins?"

Virginia pulled a wicker stool close to Nora Lee's bench. Did Nora Lee really think it gorgeous? She talked about Cleveland Wayne, the man she was to marry, and the wedding, and brides and love.

Suddenly she said: "I had a letter from Brownie Mills Carter today. Wasn't it surprising the way she ran off and married him so soon after that affair with Harry Wells?

Should She Tell?

Do you suppose, Nora Lee, she told her husband about that?"

"Why should she?"

"Don't you think a girl should tell a man that she intends to marry things like that?"

"You mean tell him about petting? Things like that. Why should she? They do it. Besides, there can't be much harm in a little kissing."

"But other things? Do you suppose men don't care about that any more?"

Nora Lee's breath became insupportable. She leaned down and picked up her dress from the floor, unwilling that Virginia should see the fiery red spurting to her temples. "Oh—if you mean that—well, it's different."

"You think she should tell that? If you loved a man, wouldn't you rather die than tell it? How do you suppose Brownie managed?"

"Oh, I don't believe she had any such tragedy to report!"

Virginia picked up the buffer and slowly ran it over her nails. "Do you remember what she said that day at Connie's—if it was the last hour of the earth she would go to Harry?

Moths

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY

THE world is a dark night full of moths and a few bright lamps spaced afar apart. The moths are the regular "ordinar" folks drawn by beauty. And the bright lamps thrown afar apart are—BEAUTY. All the world, man and woman, sighs for it. Men go without shoes and overcoats that they may put a bit of it in their children's lives.

A aspirant from a stony mountain-farm sat on a city-bound train and held between her work-broadened finger and thumb a page and stared and stared. On the page was a picture, a delicate shadowy picture of a dainty, imperious and serious girl, a cloudy white figure, her hair and dress a mist against darkness, her whole little figure of crossed hands, silken limbs, like a bright glow, while round it fluttered and beat the wings of innumerable moths.

Well, gazing with shining, small grey eyes at the little picture of the flamegirl and the moths, she up and said: "Of course, there may be wicked beauty, like they write about, vamp beauty that destroys. But to me this picture just means the beauty of every kid, from ocean water to a child's eyes, that the whole world can't help just hustling around, like bees around a honey pot."

Ways of a Husband

By Ann Lisle

MANUELO ORTIZ gave me a strange glance as he went on:

"Then Senor Harrison he change his mind. He say, 'No, I shall go with Senor Lacy and he himself will call for Rosa.' He say we shall wait fifteen minutes and then shall go the side entrance. Senor Lacy say that he understand. Then Senor Harrison he go into the studios and Senor Lacy he take me to the side entrance and he tell me what is that telephone message you speak about have said."

"It couldn't have been from Rosa," I commented thoughtfully.

"No, it was from the Senorita who makes the sculptures," Manuelo answers simply.

"Ruth Gregory," I cried.

"That is it," replied Manuelo. "It is Senorita Gregory who have telephone to Senor Harrison."

"Senorita Gregory she have been out for the first afternoon hours. She come home just soon after I leave the studios when I visit Rosa the first time, and she find that one from the boards which make the—how it says—armature on which stand her statue have been pull out and that her statue it have crash to the ground—broken to—nothing."

"Does marble breaks so easily?" I cried, beside myself for words.

"I have seen. That statue, it is destroy," Manuelo insisted.

"How terrible!" wrenched itself from my lips. "What will Ruth Gregory do? How will she bear it? She had worked so long—it meant so much."

"Who did it? Only a strong man—" Manuelo smiled wryly.

"After we wait those fifteen minutes like Senor Harrison say, we have go to the studio of Miss Gregory and we have see what I just tell you. To Senor Lacy she cura. Front him! I think she take the order what she shall do. There is detectives come. They, too, take the order from Senor Lacy. He know what is best to do. He is rich—he everyone know—that he has always right."

Manuelo's tone rang with admiration. His voice fairly glowed as he went on.

"Then we have talk enough with Senorita Gregory who is sad and making to mourn over her statue, we learn that she have once in and find it fall to the bits and that at once she have telephone the office of Senor Harrison and then to Dreamworld to say he shall come to the aid."

"Jim," I said, "had the honor to posing for that statue of 'The Young Aviator.' We are very proud of his part in it. We share the loss. But—tell me about the candid who destroyed it. You must know more—"

"I know all," broke in Manuelo proudly. "Senor Lacy he have found all. Wonderful mans is Senor Lacy. 'Ralph,' he tell me to call him, and me he call 'Ortis' and once 'Manuelo.' I am proud."

NURSERY LIFE IN A RABBIT WARREN.

By Foxy Grandpa

WE had been to visit a newborn baby when the nurse put the dear little soul in Bobby's arms you never saw such a proud boy. He felt very grown up and was very much flattered to think that he would be trusted to hold such a precious thing.

As we left the nursery, I noticed that Bunny was very careful to close the door after him. That little rabbit has such good manners that sometimes I am astounded.

"That was very thoughtful of you, Bunny," said I, "to close that door so carefully."

"Just a matter of training," I suppose," said Bunny.

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"Nursery doors should always be closed," said Bunny.

"Where under the sun did you ever get that very excellent idea?" I asked.

"From seeing my own dear mother always close the entrance to our nursery," replied Bunny.

"Tell me about it," I said.

"With pleasure," answered Bunny. "You see, Foxy Grandpa, a great many people have strange ideas about us—but, of course, that is simply because they do not know.

"In the first place, there are no better mothers in the world than rabbits. Just think how they pull the fur from their own breasts to line the little room where the babies are kept. That's what they do. And how warm and cozy that little place is.

"And another thing, a mother rabbit wouldn't have her babies in one of the open rooms in a warren. Oh, no, she digs a quiet little room off the main runways in a sort of a blind alley so that the children will not be disturbed by the rest of the family running around the corridors or by the neighbors stopping in the hallways and gossiping."

"You do make me laugh," I chuckled.

"Rabbits are very sociable, you know," continued Bunny "and they do much visiting back and forth."

"Tell me some more about the nursery," I said. "You haven't told me how your mother used to close the door."

"Oh," said Bunny, "that is very simple. When a mother rabbit leaves her babies to go out after food, she digs up the earth in front of the nursery and makes a temporary wall. Then the children cannot get out and strangers cannot get in."

"I see," said I.

"Didn't your father help your mother with the babies?" I asked.

"Not for the first two weeks," said Bunny. "In fact, the rabbits don't see their babies until their eyes are open and they are able to come out of the nursery, run along the warren and come out in the sunshine."

"Is that so?" I asked.

"I suppose the mothers have as much to do that they simply cannot be bothered with their husbands."

"Do you remember your father?" I asked.

"Who would ever think it?" I murmured.

"We're not such a bad lot," said Bunny proudly.

MARRIAGE OR CAREER?

By Beatrice Fairfax

Who occupies a unique position in the writing world as an authority on problems of love and marriage

SINCE the dawn of history—may-be earlier, who knows? women have indulged in careers.

Semiramus amused herself by building the Hanging Gardens of Babylon, which were ranked among the wonders of the ancient world. Then she conquered all that world save India.

"Pursuing Sappho" who "lived and loved" in the Isles of Greece about 600 B. C., was universally known as "The Poetess" even as Homer was called "The Poet."

One wonders whether Mother Eve may not have nibbled at the forbidden apple in hopes of filling herself by attending her knowledge of good and evil, for a "broader sphere."

Josephine had a head for business. She took a course at the University, then found employment with a well-known importing firm. Soon she became chief buyer with membership in the firm as her shining goal.

Josephine thrilled over her work. There was full measure of achievement in choosing from the lovely French models that prophesied the coming mode—those adapted to American taste and needs—in letting her intuitive sixth sense decide what to discard among myriad novelties, what to accept and stress.

Then she met Tom.

Had he realized that Josephine earned more in one week than his income for one month, it's doubtful whether he would have had courage to propose. As it was Josephine had to hint and help him a bit. And she promptly accepted him.

With luxury and the excitement and travel that were part of the career she enjoyed on the one hand, and on the other a cook-stove to work over, a household of family furniture remarkable only for shabby ugliness—and Tom, Josephine didn't hesitate.

"Any clever woman can have a career," decided Josephine. "But not every woman can have Tom for her husband."

That was five years ago. She has never regretted her decision.

Men are privileged to choose both career and love. But because for woman her children mean many years of close, loving attention and devotion and her home demands her constant supervision and inspiration, the choice between love and a career is oftentimes clear-cut. Which shall it be?

When that choice comes to you, think well before refusing the work, responsibility, self-sacrifice and joy of love. For home and love, husband and children are your heritage as a woman.

solid crust is at least sixteen hundred million years old. That adds considerably to the old idea of a world created six thousand years ago. Feeble human imagination cannot grasp such a period as 1,600,000,000 years. Only 12,000 years ago we were in the stone age. But the earth's great age encourages us to believe that this planet and human beings on it will exist for several hundred millions of years more, at least, as science predicts. A great deal can be done in that time. Even one million years should show considerable improvement when you consider what men have accomplished in 12,000 years.

IT APPEARS that four gentlemen have been representing the Philippine government in the United States, with an expense account. It also appears that by a gentleman's agreement evidently, each of them charges exactly nine hundred dollars every month for clothing. This teaches not only that Filipinos are hard on their clothes, but also that they have not mixed with American politicians for nothing, and are now about ready to govern themselves.

TRINITY UNIVERSITY in North Carolina has changed its name to Duke University, thereby acquiring many millions, generously given by James B. Duke. The university gets six millions at once for buildings, and ultimately will have an endowment the income from twenty-five millions more.

"WHAT'S IN a name?" is answered by Mr. Duke effectively. That university, by any other name, would not have got $31,000,000. Who can estimate the future value of such gifts to education? What a blessing that men now give vast fortunes to help others, instead of spending the money as of old, in an effort to buy special Divine favors for their own unimportant souls.

J. P. VAN ZANDT, of the Army Air Service, having traveled 6,000 miles on various European air lines, reports that flying is past the experimental stage and under conservative conditions as safe as travel on the land.

SINCE THE WAR, commercial planes have traveled more than twenty-six million miles on a purely business and non-experimental basis. Within twenty-five years any long-distance journey by train will be confined to old-fashioned, conservative people. In fifty years, for long distances, trains will be used as little as stage coaches are used now. For some it is hard to imagine that. But many find it hard to imagine anything.

LOST JOB AS 'L' DRIVER, RULES NEW YORK

Company Thought Hylan Took a Curve Too Fast and Discharged Him

New York, Dec. 30.—John F. Hylan, Mayor of New York, was free from his engine driver's job on a Brooklyn Elevated Railroad of the then Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, February 1, 1907, for having taken a curve too fast, it developed today as a sidelight to the transit jungle investigation being conducted by order of Governor Smith.

Clarence J. Shearn, attorney for the State Transit Commission, failed to get this information into the investigation record yesterday when he asked for it in connection with the Mayor's witness stand assertion that he knew about railroads as "an old railroad man."

Official of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Rapid Transit Corporation, successors to the B. R. T. said today their records showed Engineer Hylan had been discharged by the late Superintendent J. D. Barton because he had jeopardized the lives of passengers in driving over a curve at too great speed.

The Mayor today denied the curve-speeding incident, declaring he was driving so slowly that he was enabled to stop his train in time to save the life to superintendent Barton, who had stepped upon the tracks in front of his engine from behind a signal tower.

Flappers in Berlin Look Like Snakes in New Hosiery

Berlin, Dec. 30.—Snake skin designs are the latest in women's hosiery here. They come in various colors, but the most popular is a sort of coffee-and-milk shade with vertical stripes.

Then there is the garter snake stocking, with long yellow stripes and here and there a touch of brown or black.

Chocolate and coffee shades bearing blotches and spots, patterned after the markings of the water moccasin and other reptiles which do not go in for stripes, also are in demand.

MY CREED

This is my creed: To give the world a grin,
To try to say it always with a smile.
I would forget the ruthless race to win,
Could I but sprinkle joy and mirth the while.
I care not what reward may come to me,
For happiness cannot combine with greed.
I am the better, if some other be,
For anything I do. This is my creed.

Which, however, is apt to be construed wrongly. We are always in an eager and receptive mood regarding the reward stuff.

TRUTHFUL RESOLUTIONS

I will not give up a darn thing unless the one makes me. I will stay out all night whenever I care and will indulge all beverages I can lay my hands on, provided they have been analyzed. I will not try to save up my money for a rainy day, for I can stay in the house when it comes. I will not endeavor to work my head and hands off for the boss, because it wouldn't get me a thing if did.

I will not stop chewing things and biting when I have cash. I will not get up and fight the Free Water meetings, provided I can bulldoze Henry into doing it. CHOPS HOLE IN ICE TO END LIFE

Former Warren Official Dies in 7 Feet of Water in Pond

Warren, Dec. 20.—Frederick Horace Sylvester, sixty-five years old, former superintendent of streets in this town, decided to commit suicide by drowning. He went to Powdermill Pond and chopped a hole through the ice. The hole was small and Sylvester was a large man, but he thrust himself through it and was drowned in seven feet of water.

He was seen chopping the ice, but it occurred to no one that Sylvester was preparing to take his own life. The body was recovered. Sylvester leaves a widow, from whom he was separated; two sisters and a brother.

POLICEMAN IS RESCUED AT PROVIDENCE

Providence, Dec. 20.—A policeman, trapped by flames, was rescued by firemen and 100 persons, hastily aroused, were driven from their homes in two fires here today.

Patrolman Thomas Dolan was aided down a ladder from the second story of a burning building on Pocasset avenue after he had been overcome by smoke.

Fire which threatened to spread from the Sterling Supply Company Building on Shawmut street and consume an entire block of frame dwellings drove the residents of the section, scantily clad, to the street.

As the flames, driven by a strong wind, leaped from the three-story brick structure which housed the supply company, police went rapidly through the neighborhood arousing occupants of the houses.

Nearly all residents of the section fled in their nightclothes, bearing with them such personal valuables and belonging as they could carry.

Occupants of a two-story wooden dwelling adjoining the burning building were the first to flee. Julius Ely, his wife, Mollie, and their seven-months-old infant, together with Anna and Yannie Kuchner hastened from their home when sniffing smoke and threatening flames made it impossible for them to remain.

Six horses were led to safety from a barn in the rear of the Ely home. Flames spread to the barn later, badly damaging it.

The fire was discovered by Patrolman Arthur H. Kane, who ran a half-mile to the next fire station to sound an alarm. A second alarm was sounded by the firemen.

The board elected Charles G. Gerrish of No. 70 Boston street, to fill the place of Alderman William C. Abbott, who died recently.

JAMES DUNCAN RALLIES AFTER AN OPERATION

New York, Dec. 20.—James Duncan of Quincy, Mass., vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, is convalescing at the Lexington Hospital here from an operation which followed a partial breakdown, caused by the strain in accompanying the funeral train of Samuel Gompers from Mexico to New York. The hardships of the journey caused a weakened condition in Mr. Duncan's blood, necessitating a sinus operation last Tuesday. Mrs. Duncan is at the hospital with her husband.

LAWSON'S TALE BEST SELLER

"Frenzied Finance" Revelations Astound America; the Author Full of Enthusiasm

THIS is the twenty-fifth chapter of the adventurous career of Thomas W. Lawson, one-time financial magnate, now broken in health and spirit and close to poverty. Previous chapters have related his adventures in finance and in home building. Others will follow.

THE struggling "Everybody's Magazine" lit upon a welcome gold mine when it secured the "Frenzied Finance" expose from the pen of Tom Lawson.

When the July, 1904, issue that contained Lawson's announcement of his coming revelations, appeared on the stands, the entire edition was snapped up in three days.

The announcement proved sensational. Newspapers throughout the country lifted great sections for use in news stories on the coming exposé. Editorials on the subject were also published even in Canada and England.

While some of the newspapers scoffed at the announcement that "Frenzied Finance" would bare the secrets of the financial world and "The System," others boasted, and still other opined that it was well for the souls of both Lawson and his enemies to air a complete public confession.

Calls Names Real Ones

The following issue of "Everybody's," containing the first chapter, was sold out in two days—even with the extra 100,000 copies placed upon the stands. The thing was going better even than the editors had hoped dreamed.

Lawson was still filled with enthusiasm, and he scratched off the third installment in his fair as Young'at in jig time, and in a fog of smoke from the "Abraham Lincoln" brand of cigars then smoked—a brand imported from Germany, incidentally.

When he did write, Lawson wrote furiously. Sometimes he would discard the big pencil for a pen. Then, tiring of the pen, he would hurl it aside and seize up the pencil again.

More often than not, on a single sheet of paper, not more than eight or ten words would appear. He scrawled his letters from half an inch to a full inch in height when excited.

Those prone to figuring out such things can calculate for themselves how many sheets of paper he utilized in writing the approximately 400,000 words composing "Frenzied Finance."

The third issue of "Everybody's," carrying 300,000 copies over its regular run, was snatched up in two days and the rest of the public who had been disappointed clamored for more.

Lawson Gets Balky

Everything was lovely and rosy for the publishers, until one day they ran up against one of Lawson's stubborn streaks.

Like most magazine publications, the issues of "Everybody's" were made up two or three months ahead. The author could not know this, but seemingly, on lazy occasions, did not care.

Came a month when Lawson's new blast for "Frenzied Finance" did not arrive on time. The editors wrote a polite letter that contained such terms as "regret," "your convenience" and like phrases. But no answer came back, despite their letters.

A firmer position was taken and a stronger letter was mailed, but still no answer from Lawson. Finally, in desperation, the editor held up the magazine makeup and raced to Boston.

Lawson was urbanity itself. He inquired as to the rush and appeared surprised when the frantic editor said his magazine must be set up and in print within a week.

"But it doesn't come out on the stands for more than a month yet, my dear fellow," protested Lawson.

"Yes, but we've got to get it all over the country, get out posters and ads on what's in the new installment—there are a thousand things to do."

After much more haranguing the financier promised that he would get to work on the installment right away.

"What! Get to work? Haven't

U.S. Should Lead War on Opium, Italian Savant Says

By PROFESSOR ETTORE LEVI,
Member of the High Council of Italian Hygiene.
Special Cable to Universal Service.

Rome, Dec. 30.—The production of and traffic in opium constitutes an imposing problem of international health economics. Several hundred millions of Asiatics have undermined both their moral and working efficiency by deliberate poisoning—that is to say, by poisoning which could be avoided.

Moreover, this poison tide rises threateningly towards Japan, North and South America and Europe.

Public opinion is sensitive only to more sensational catastrophes such as wars, earthquakes and floods. While the tremendous damage resulting from the World War deeply touched world opinion, the latter seems not to realize the insidious work of opium as a race poison which is rapidly becoming more destructive than any war.

The opium question being above all a fundamental problem of international morals, all civilized states are either directly or indirectly involved.

Primary responsibility lies with the British and Japanese Governments, which profit by the opium production from which have been drawn profits estimated at several hundred million pounds. But almost equally open to condemnation are all the civilized powers which have inexcusably acquiesced in and tolerated such an insult to civilization.

They are now paying the penalty, for with all their ingenuity they are unable to close their own frontiers to the insidious drug.

Nations like Britain, just as individuals, engaged in the unholy traffic cannot escape the consequences of their immoral deeds. In the British Isles as in the Dominions, regulations have proven vain to stamp out the spread of the vice, while chronic revolt in India is intensified by this tragic moral weapon, which England has forged against herself.

All laws and regulations by conferences will be useless until the predominating influence of Britain in the League of Nations's council is turned against the trade in and cultivation of the poppy itself.

The British people, who lead in many fields of human activity, cannot tolerate a further continuance of the condition which is contrary to all modern ideals of morals, economics and international health. When British public opinion is adequately enlightened it will know how to react on the government so as to force a renouncing of the chronic poisoning of a hundred million Asiatics. That will be a great day for humanity and will save the Empire from sure moral and economic danger.

I believe, however, that the mission of leading the world crusade against opium should belong to the United States. This country recently has given the world a wonderful example by the eradication of another race poison—alcohol. Let the United States win the gratitude of the world by defending not only themselves but the helpless Eastern peoples against a still more dangerous destroyer—opium.

BRIBERY PROBE FOR JURY IN M'COY CASE

Los Angeles, Dec. 30.—Investigation of alleged jury tampering in connection with the trial of Norman Shelby, known as Kid McCoy, will be begun at once, according to District Attorney Keyes.

One "hold out" juror remained obdurate all day despite repeated efforts of other jurors to talk him over to an agreement with the majority.

In case the appeal of McCoy's attorneys for a new trial is granted, jurors in that case will be locked up from the time they are accepted, the district attorney says.

The verdict of manslaughter was returned in Superior Court, after the nine women and three men, composing the jury, had had the case in their hands 78 hours, and spent thirty-three and one-half hours in actual deliberation.

When the verdict was brought in, McCoy's composure, which he had maintained during the trial, broke completely. He cried like a baby.

"It's not right! It's not right!" he repeated. "I never killed Tress. She was the only woman I ever loved.

"I wanted them either to hang me or acquit me. I wanted no compromise."

Sentence will be pronounced on McCoy January 2, Judge Crail announced. Under the California law, manslaughter is punishable by a term of from one to ten years in the penitentiary.

On January 5, McCoy, it was announced, will be placed on trial in Judge Crail's court on grand jury indictments charging him with four counts of robbery and three counts of assault. These charges are the result of McCoy's shooting episode in the Mors' art shop in West Seventh street, the morning after she was found slain.

U. S. TO PROTEST BRITISH POTATO BAN

Washington, Dec. 30.—The American Embassy at London has been instructed to make representations to the British government against the recent order prohibiting the importation of American potatoes into England and Wales on account of the potato bug.

GERMS ARE TOO WELL HIDDEN

Tufts Bacteriology Department Head Disagrees With Dr. Green's Theory

Dr. Timothy Leary, head of the department of bacteriology at Tufts, finds fault with the conclusion of his professional brother, Dr. Robert S. Green of the University of Minnesota.

As a result of experiments, Dr. Green states that he has discovered a serum composed of isolated ultramicrobes which, when exhibited to the bacteria of the human body will kill the germs of all diseases of man or beast except tuberculosis.

In the first place, Dr. Leary, who has dealt with bacteria and their functions for many years, says that bacteria are so interlarded in the niches of our bodies that all of them can never be reached. "Phages" do a specified job on certain bacteria. They can't be said to be the ultra germs.

NOTHING NEW.

"They are everywhere," he continues, "One doesn't know where to look for them. So how can a medical man make such outlandish conclusions about treating these ultramicrobes which, when applied, will kill the most highly developed culture of pneumonia, typhoid, pneumonia, dysentery or diphtheria? Let him find all of them.

"When bacteria are lodged in the intestines you know where to look for them and they can be directly attacked. But I would like to see Dr. Green attempt to attack these microbes when they are lodged in the gall bladder.

"Then, again, there is nothing new about this discovery. It is not to be credited to the University of Minnesota, but to France. A French scientist by the name of De Herel started this work two or three years ago. The science of it is still in its infancy and no general statements can be made about it."

NOT FATAL TO ALL.

"Although these 'phages' do kill many germs, there is no evidence that they will kill all germs. There is no worthwhile evidence that 'phages' will act on pneumonia. It is a shame and an outrage for a man to publish such facts. Poor people will come to the hospitals as a result and ask to be cured directly of typhoid or pneumonia, and when they are told that they can't, they will immediately say it was stated so in the newspapers.

"Of course, it is true to a certain extent, but one can't say that all diseases of man or beast can be done away with by means of this serum of ultra-microbes. The mere fact that these bacteria are so small shows that there is a possibility of there being more bacteria of still smaller size and invisibility."

TO BROADCAST HUB NEW YEAR'S PROGRAM

Broadcasting the civic celebration direct from the Boston Common will be the feature of the New Year's Eve programme of Station WNAC. At 8 o'clock the State Theatre Orchestra will start the evening's program with a group of timely selections, an hour of dance music from the old State Ballroom and then the speaking and musical events on the Common.

At midnight the Knickerbocker male quartet is scheduled to hold forth from the Copley Plaza.

URGES $10 TAX TO PAY OFF BAY STATE DEBTS

All residents of the State, not registered voters, except those under 21 and those exempted because of insanity or other cause, would be assessed a special poll tax of $10 a year under a bill filed today with the Legislature by Representative Arthur B. Blanchard of Cambridge.

It is estimated the special tax would amount to at least $5,000,000 annually. This revenue would be applied to wiping out the State debt which today is around $20,000,000.

WHITINSVILLE MILLS WILL REDUCE WAGES

Whitinsville, Dec. 30.—The Linwood and the Saundersville Cotton Mills, owned by Arthur F. Whitin and employing 750 persons, posted notices today of a reduction in wages and of an increase to full working time. The wage reduction is understood to range between 10 and 12 per cent.

COMMISSION FORBIDS MALONEY-MONTGOMERY RETURN BOUT

'GRUDGE' GO FROWNED UPON

By JACK CONWAY

THE State Boxing Commission will refuse to sanction a return bout between Jim Maloney of South Boston and Sully Montgomery, the former Centre College star, it was learned today.

A bout in which the two boxers engaged in Boston a week ago ended with Montgomery being disqualified for fouling the South Boston fighter.

Although the commission refused to give its reasons for its stand, it is intimated that a return bout would probably assume the nature of a grudge affair. Under the boxing law an engagement of this kind would be illegal.

JACK SHARKEY, Roxbury heavyweight, has been offered a bout with Charley Weinert to be staged by the Commercial A. C. at Mechanics Building on January 26.

Billy McCarney, Weinert's manager, has already agreed to terms for a tussle between the conqueror of Luis Firpo and the best available heavyweight.

Jim Maloney was first offered the tussle with Weinert, but turned down the match. Manager Johnny McGrath resents the fact Weinert refused to battle Maloney at the Christmas Basket show. Now that Maloney is out front he intends to make Weinert wait.

Sharkey and Weinert battled at Newark several weeks ago. While Weinert won the popular decision as a result of his effective work in the early rounds, all newspaper accounts of the bout agreed that Sharkey had the best of the going in the last two rounds.

Sharkey is prepared to meet Weinert again, as he believes he can defeat him decisively. Johnny Buckley, Sharkey's manager, has not closed the tussle, as Sharkey is boxing Jack Demave of Pittsburgh in New York on January 5. He has also signed for another New York bout providing he wins over Demave.

TONY CARNEY, New Bedford bantamweight, has placed himself under the direction of Charley Mealey. Carney is one of the most promising little fellow in New England and should make a name for himself in the ring.

PAL REED of Framingham is back in Boston after his bout with Jack Delaney at Bridgeport. The latter failed to make good his claim he would win by a knockout. Delaney was badly tired when the mill ended. Reed admits Delaney outpointed him, but he says this was due to the fact the Bridgeport man resorted to careful boxing tactics. Pal says that the only time he went to the canvas was in the seventh round, when he slipped after a mix-up at close quarters. He regained his feet before the referee could even start to count.

Pal says he is now ready to battle Frank Moody again or tackle Hambone Kelly in the event that worthy seeks new ring action.

PAUL BERLENBACH, is seen over in New York since he knocked out Larry Fairtrige, colored middleweight champion. Few believed he would be able to accomplish such an impressive feat. Berlenbach has improved 100 per cent as a boxer since he was knocked out by Delaney. If these men meet again, Berlenbach will probably enter the ring a favorite.

* * *

TEX RICKARD says Jack Dempsey will engage in two bouts next year. The champion will be pitted against Tom Gibbons and Harry Wills.

MIKE McTIGUE rules a favorite in the early betting for his no-decision bout with Mickey Walker. McTigue will have a weight advantage of more than fifteen pounds. Walker will probably not scale more than 158 pounds, while McTigue will be up around 170 pounds.

TIGER FLOWERS, who clashes with Billy Britton in this city on January 5, will probably be signed to tackle Harry Greb in a bout for the world's middleweight championship in New York the latter part of January.

JOHNNY WILSON has not signed to battle Flowers in a return bout, but says he will do so as soon as he has got himself into condition by engaging in a couple of hard battles.

* * *

IVEY LEWIS, for many years associated with the Armory A. A., is at his desk at the Suffolk A. A. office. Lewis is assisting Matchmaker Tom Goodwin in making arrangements for the next Suffolk A. A. show which will be staged in Mechanics Building on January 20.

INSIDE GOLF By Chester Horton

Maker of Fifty-one Golf Champions

This is the second in a series of golf lessons by Mr. Horton. These articles will appear daily in the sporting section of the Boston American. They are intended to improve your game. Whether you are a duffer, a good average golfer or an expert, you will find valuable advice in them. They are brief and to the point. Consume this morsel and you want it every day.

My "straight line" principle for the hips is a twin with the "pull down" principle. These two, working together, should make the swing very near automatic for most golfers. The automatic swing is the goal to strive for. More about the "pull down" later.

In the correct swing the movement of the body is kept to the minimum. You do not twist and distort the body at all—keep it simple. Thus, in the backswing the right hip moves straight out to the right from three to possibly five inches, depending on your build. In the forward swing—with the left arm at all times straight—the left hip is shot into the ball just as the clubhead meets the ball. The great distinction here is that this left hip is shot straight out—into the line of flight direction. Get that point clearly. The hip does not turn around to the left with the body. The right hip to the right, in the backswing; left hip shot straight into the ball in the forward swing. That's the "straight line" for the hips. Try it.

McGRAW NAMED IN $200,000 DAMAGE SUIT

By W. S. FARNSWORTH.

New York, Dec. 30.—John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, and Judge Francis X. McQuade, treasurer of the club, have been served with papers to appear in court this week.

While the papers have been served in blank, it was learned that Frank Peabody, former captain of detectives in the New York police department, who recently resigned from the force, threatens suit against the baseball magnates.

It is alleged that Peabody intends to ask for $100,000 damages from each for bringing McGraw and McQuade into partnership with Charles A. Stoneham when the three purchased the controlling interest in the National Exhibition Company (the Giants), on January 14, 1919.

PEABODY'S STORY.

Shortly after the deal was consummated Peabody told this writer that he was instrumental in forming the Stoneham-McGraw-McQuade combination. It was our opinion that at the time Peabody figured to be declared "in" on the deal some way or other. On many occasions since he has told me that he was "double crossed."

It is believed that as long as Peabody, one of the most efficient men on the police force, was acting as an officer of the law he did not consider it proper to ask for damages against McGraw and McQuade.

Peabody has retained Aaron Honig, attorney.

The writer, since learning about the serving of the papers, has been endeavoring to get in touch with the parties named.

Peabody was reported out of the city today. As for Honig after giving this reporter "a fine merry go round for two days," finally consented to give us an audience this afternoon.

McGRAW IN DENIAL.

According to Peabody's story, back in 1912 he knew that Stoneham wanted to buy the stock of the John T. Brush heirs and Harry Hempstead. He also knew that he then went out and told McQuade and McGraw about the matter and "fixed" them with Stoneham.

Peabody believed at the time that he was to be taken care of for his time and effort.

McGraw, at his home in Pelham, admitted he had been served, but denied that Peabody had anything whatsoever to do with his purchasing of stock in the Giants or with bringing him into partnership with Stoneham and McQuade.

The judge, who was spending the day with the Giants' manager, also denied Peabody had anything to do with his becoming a part owner of the club.

REPORT KAPLAN CAN'T MAKE FEATHER LIMIT

New York, Dec. 30.—A representative of the State Boxing Commission today descended on the training quarters here of Louis Kid Kaplan of Meriden, Ct., who battles Danny Kramer of Philadelphia next Friday night for the featherweight championship of the world at Madison Square Garden.

Rumors have been current that Kaplan was having difficulty in making the featherweight limit.

BRITTON UPSET FLOWERS IN 15 ROUNDS

The Russian Cyclone, which swept town recently, not the sort that levels barns, cottages and wheezing old windmills, but a flatic wind that bowls over all sorts of middleweights in its path, will whirl into the Hub next Monday night when Billy Britton of Kansas City returns here to clash with Tiger Flowers, the Georgia Tornado.

Ever since Britton swept down onto the Hub almost unannounced and swept through ten dazzling rounds which bewildered George Robinson of Cambridge, Hub fans have been awaiting the return visit of this tornado.

Put him against some good middleweight!

That was the demand of the fans after glimpsing Britton against Robinson.

Now the Commercial Club has come through and presents one of the greatest middleweights in the country for him—Tiger Flowers—with a thousand knockout over Johnny Wilson.

It will not be Britton's first fight with Flowers. That's why the club found so much trouble in making the match. Flowers hasn't forgotten the fact that Britton beat him in a fifteen-round bout not so long ago.

Willie Gendwell of Somerville and Battling Budd of Atlanta, lightweights, clash in the semi-final.

JAP CHAMPION IN BOUT WITH MALCOWICZ

Tarro Miyake, Japanese champion, will make his first Boston appearance in a finish match with Sergeant Joe Malcowicz at the Grand Opera House tomorrow night.

Miyake has been a wonderful attraction wherever he has appeared and his sensational matches with Ed Stranger Lewis, Joe Stecker, Dick Daviscourt and others were the talk of the cities where they were staged.

Many fans are interested in the Japanese style of wrestling, but this match will be at catch-as-catch-can style. Malcowicz is a brilliant wrestler, and so the Jap will have to show the real stuff if he gets away with a victory in his first start in Boston.

The other half of the double star card will bring together Harry Stevens, the Pennsylvania heavyweight sensation, and Leone Labriola, the Lion of Italy.

The promoter is still looking for a suitable opponent to meet Mouzar to open the show. The show will be staged Wednesday instead of Thursday as is the usual custom owing to a misunderstanding in dates.

Last Night in the Ring

Baltimore—Kid Williams, ex-bantamweight champion of the world, was awarded the decision over Joey Schwartz of Washington, 15 rounds.

3 REDS WAIVED ON BY ALL CLUBS

Cincinnati, Dec. 30.—All clubs have waived on Outfielder Sherlock, Infielder Fonseca and Shortstop Cavaney of the Cincinnati Nationals, August Herrmann, president of the Reds, announced here.

"The Cincinnati club," Herrmann said, "has thirty men on the playing roster, but we will not take thirty South to train. There will be a reduction long before February 25.

"It is surprising that nobody seemed to demand Fonseca and Cavaney, but doubtless somebody will give a fair equivalent for them in trades later on."

BASKETBALL RESULTS

Princeton 40, Carnegie Tech 20.
Medford Knockers 37, Malden C. C. Jrs. 21.

Walter Johnson is Offered Cash to Buy Club

Reno, Nev., Dec. 30.—Walter Johnson, Washington American League baseball pitcher, who, according to reports from the East today, had been offered financial aid by two Ann Arbor, Mich., men, to help in purchasing the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast League, admitted today that he understood such negotiations were under way, but said he was not in a position to discuss the matter.

JUMBO FIVE OPENS SEASON TOMORROW

Tufts basketball team will open its campaign tomorrow evening at the Northeastern. Captain Herb Dawson, Van French, Jack Wilson, Harold McDonnell and George Perry will start against the Invaders.

M'TIGUE PICKS CAMP TO TRAIN FOR WALKER

New York, Dec. 30.—Mike McTigue, world's light heavyweight champion, pitched his camp today at Summit, N. J., in preparation for the 12-round match at the Newark Armory January 7, when he will meet Mickey Walker, welterweight titleholder.

Walker already is in training at Rumson, N. J.

The card of preliminaries to this match has been completed and includes two ten-round bouts, one between Bobby Barrett of Philadelphia and Jack Rappaport of Orange, N. J., and the other involving Harry Marione of Jersey City and Charley Arthurs of Yonkers, N. Y.

GRIDIRON KICKOFF MAY GO BACK TO FORTY-YARD LINE

GAME O. K. OTHERWISE SAYS HALL

New York, Dec. 30.—Football today contains practically every element necessary to the highest type of sport in the opinion of E. K. Hall of New York, chairman of the American Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee, expressed in his annual report today to the national Intercollegiate Athletic Association

On the whole Mr. Hall says, results from the new rules of 1924 [illegible] but there is room for improvement. He considers retaining the point of kick off to the [illegible] the last year which occurred during the past season and at the same time returning to the game the [illegible] the run back of kickoff.

INCREASED POPULARITY.

"Every year since the rules have been in substantially their present form," the report says, "the game has increased in popularity and in a good many [illegible] seems as if the interest in the game had reached a maximum. [illegible] of the game [illegible] there [illegible] before.

"I am satisfied that the reason for this is found in the fact that the game [illegible] and [illegible] sport.

"The [illegible] not be disturbed by the [illegible] it attracts to large audiences and that the receipts roll up into large figures.

"Let us on the contrary be proud of a game which is so wholesome and so rare a sport that the friends of the colleges and of the game are not [illegible] to deposit the gates of the stadiums through their small contributions, seldom exceeding $2 each, as a amount of money which literally is supporting practically every other branch of athletic activity in the college.

OPENS SPORT T OALL.

"The means that through the financial backing which football in its present form has made possible [illegible] that which best [illegible] lifting for [illegible] the burden of finding facilities and equipment for [illegible] sport in college spirit [illegible] from those who wish to participate and opportunity opens to all.

"A score of men participate in athletics in the colleges today where one [illegible] Football [illegible] and I take it that no one will deny that the result is an infinitely more wholesome moulding of the [illegible] today or that the result will be found unutterably worth while in the coming generation.

"The report for the year 1924 would be incomplete without calling attention to the fact that [illegible] game now played does not begin to put the strain on players which the old game did. One needs only to look at the schedules of 1924, which would have been deemed unthinkable a few years ago, and then note the fact that some of the teams which played the hardest schedules came up to their final games in the pink of condition."

COACHES ASK FOUR MINOR CHANGES

By TOM THORPE

New York, Dec. 30.—Few changes will be made in the gridiron code if the recommendations made at the third annual convention here of the American Coaches' Association of America carry any weight with the code makers.

Most [illegible] are [illegible] [illegible] in its present code. In their opinion only four minor changes are needed.

The changes proposed were:

1—A [illegible] of [illegible] shall be penalized five yards, but the down shall remain the [illegible] penalty makes first down.

2—The kickoff shall be made from [illegible] lines also that a clay tee not more than four inches high be employed in making the kickoff.

3—That the head linesman be instructed to watch reaching the [illegible] when makes the kick, in case of a punt or a drop kick.

4—That a kick blocked behind the line of scrimmage so as a forward pass be side recovering it; that in the case where a kick is partially blocked and the ball [illegible] treated the same as it would in case the ball had not been touched [illegible]

NORTHEASTERN TRACK STAR OUT FOR SEASON

Northeastern University has lost one of her brightest track and [illegible] [illegible] F. Davidson of Quincy, captain of the track team, who broke his leg while attempting to climb a gutter leading to a balcony in order that he might assist in extinguishing a fire at the Minot Fire House in North Scituate. The gutter took loose from its fastenings and David son was hurled to the ground

In the high jump practice he has been reaching for six feet, and he was Northeastern's hope in the discus throw.

In the roughest hockey match seen at the Arena in several years, Mickey Roach and the rest of the Hamilton Tigers downed the Boston Bruins 3 to 1 last night before a crowd of 7,000 fans in the National League.

FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

Whose children are getting college educations these days?

By far the greatest increase in students consists of the children of skilled workmen.

The only other class able to send more of the children to college than formerly are business men.

The most serious decrease has occurred in the children of agriculturalists.

But a decrease is also shown in the children of professional men, including ministers, lawyers, doctors, teachers, dentists and librarians.

Retail merchants apparently have prospered more than manufacturers. Judging by the number of their children able to attend college under the heading of business men's colleges, the most notable increases come from the homes of our butchers, grocers, and coal merchants. Restaurant keepers also show up well. The dressmaking business makes a rather poor showing.

* * *

These facts come from records compiled by the University of Illinois for the ten-year period 1913-1923. Total registration increased 141 per cent.

But the increase in children of wards of former folk increased only 72 per cent.

Those of skilled laborers increased no less than 248 per cent., much the greatest gain of all.

Business shows an increase of 169 per cent.

All other classes show decreases.

The College of Agriculture at the same university records a similarly unpleasant picture of economic and educational conditions farm-wise.

Less than 43 per cent of the 700 students last year came from the soil.

Some 37 per cent. of the total attendance came from cities of 5,000 or more population, including, presumably, a large proportion of youths not born and bred on farms.

Contrast this with the showing made at the university for the children of parents engaged in other occupations. Between 1913 and 1923 in Glenn Griswold points out, the registration of the children of carpenters increased from 52 to 318, mechanics from 52 to 314, electricians from nothing to 22, barbers from 15 to 31, miners from 19 to 55, painters from 8 to 53, plumbers from 4 to 35, tailors from 18 to 56.

The total of 994 children of skilled laborers registered last year contrasted with 284 in 1913.

No fewer than 155 children of unskilled laborers were graduated the university last year, including 18 children of teamsters, 11 of janitors, 5 of waiters, 3 of sextons and 2 of hotel porters.

RAILROADS OF NEW ENGLAND BIG PROBLEM

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

The railroads of New England will undoubtedly afford for 1925 some of the incoming year's most important problems.

Different plans for upbuilding of the Boston & Maine are just now in the limelight, with the New Haven apparently taking pretty good care of itself.

But the New Haven is aware, as well as the Boston & Maine, that the entire trunk line situation as affecting roads on the business and that competition must be met in some more costly manner than in the past.

The merchants of New England, large and small, should have a voice in ultimate decisions regarding important railroad changes. The railroads exist for these merchants and the public at large, though shippers have frequently complained that it has looked as if things were the other way around.

We are not pessimistic, but while plans are in the making today and the New England shoppers remain the shuttlecocks of speculation, it might be a good idea to limit the number of persons in the broth is prepared for our tasting.

The Homer Loring plan may not be perfect, but it is at least entitled to careful consideration. It would be pleasing to see other plans presented that are as coherent. How far much one may differ with details.

The writer would like to see a solution of the railroad problem that does not call for the elimination of any present-day trackage, unless it is replaced by railroad operated truck and passenger bus service.

PRICES MIXED IN NEW YORK

Confused price movements marked the opening hour of today's stock market, with contrasting variations reflecting the play of opposing speculative forces. U. S. Steel, American Can, Colorado Fuel and International Paper sagged a point down a point each, while American Can and General Asphalt showed contrasted with 2¼ in 1913.

More general weakness was displayed in the later dealings as grow ing demand for money against the high money rates led to increased speculative offerings for both ac counts.

U. S. Steel, which established a new high at 121 yesterday, sold at 119, while U. S. Cast Iron Pipe and General Motors fell back ½ point each, and Central Asphalt forfeited its early gain.

Radio Corporation fluctuated erratically, falling about 2 points to 56⅜ and then rallying to a new top price at 60. Call money was 5 per cent.

Chesapeake & Ohio, American Can & Foundation were in good demand, rising a point each.

Foreign exchange opened nigher in sympathy with the sterling rise in the rate to the highest level in five years at $4.78⅜.

LAWSON STORY PROVES TO BE BEST SELLER

"Frenzied Finance" Revelations Astound America; the Author Full of Enthusiasm

you got it done?" the editor inquired.

"How?" Why, of course not. I've been busy; very busy."

The editor nodded, then threatened that installment in my hands." he declared.

"All right, then. If you must have it, you must. But you editors are terrible nuisances."

Lawson busied himself down in his office at Young's, armed with all his writing paraphernalia, enough cigars and cigarettes to do an army and two bottles of champagne.

The editor stayed right with him. He had come to carry out his duty to type copy as it slid from the fingers hand into the waste basket. He had pledged himself to catch the afternoon waited on, with the editor lolled back in a chair, alternately skimming over a magazine or book, figuring the ticker tape in his corner of the office, nibbling down to the chasm of City Hall avenue, yawning.

Every fifteen minutes the door opened silently and the typist came in, gently lifted away the basket containing Lawson's copy and dropped on his right, poured some champagn for himself and his guest, lighted a fresh "Abraham Lincoln" and resumed his scribbling.

It was after 5 o'clock when he threw down his pen and said:

"Better have some dinner, Cap't work on an empty stomach."

The editor, who literally was scarved, but who did not wish to interrupt the flow of his temperamental fountain of dollars, was decidedly agreeable.

Editor As Typist

Dinner over, the mad scribbling was resumed and the midnight hour found the same actors doing the same things. Except for an occasional swallow of champagne in a bucket beside his desk, Lawson never paused.

Somewhere in the early hours of the morning, when nobody was still outside, except for the rumble of a milk wagon or paper team, the typist hungered weakly for a bite and ate for the hundredth time exchanged baskets.

The editor followed him with solicitous but weary eye. Then he tiptoed out after the typist.

"Better lie down a while and get some sleep, I'll do the typing for you."

Then they collaborated on turning Lawson's own private bed back into its suite, opening it for the fatigued typist, who crawled in gratefully.

The editor, himself somewhat balmy from lack of sleep and the fetid air of the office, tucked him in carefully, and reeled back to the typewriter.

And the editor wrote on the machine while his contributor scribbled away in the next room, absorbed so deeply that he never noticed the company's food when the editor went in to change the baskets and secure fresh material, the finisher did not note a different step.

Dawn had broken and the sun was beginning to drift into the heavens, when the regular typist awoke and, stricken by horror at the sight of Lawson's empty bed, hurriedly played chambermaid himself and straightened it out.

Worked 24 Hours

Breakfast was served in the room to the weary trio, and Lawson, although showing signs of fatigue, declared he would finish the installment in one sitting if he could help it.

"It may not kill you, but it may," asserted the nervous editor who had been through the hardest and most nerve-wracking nights of his existence. "Next time you'd better start early and get ahead of your story. Once ahead of it, you can write at your leisure."

For a solid twenty-four hours, with but the brief meal times deducted, Lawson scrawled out the delayed installment of "Frenzied Finance."

Written entirely from memory—never once did he refer to a note or reference—the feat was remarkable. Back row of Lawson's "Frenzied Finance" installments was from 15,- 000 to 18,000 words in length, also, and there is no reason to doubt that this was any shorter.

The editor went back to his magazine with the installment all freshly typed and thanking Lawson for the authors were not so independent as Lawson and could afford to work when and where they willed.

"Frenzied Finance" had reached the point in October, 1904, where thousands of letters inspired by the expose were pouring into Lawson daily.

Of course he could not answer them all. Some were from persons who had been "gypped" in Amalgamated; others took Lawson to task for his own failings, and still others praised him to the skies for daring to publish his indictment of "The System."

Therefore, a department was begun in the magazine, called "Lawson and his Critics." In this section, the financier attempted to answer certain "type" letters, the answer to one covering many similar letters.

"Frenzied Finance" had taken no nothing ever before or since in a magazine has taken with the public.

Where Can Man Be Happy?

Where There Is a Contented Mind There Is Happiness Both for Men and Women

A reader asks, "Is a man happy if he remains in the humble place and station of his birth?"

A man may find in the lonely cottage, the village, or in the big city of his birth, full opportunity to develop all his powers, to do all the good that is IN HIM, to utilize wisely the uplifting force that we call ambition.

As a general proposition, however, a cultivated and civilized human being, like a cultivated and civilized shade tree, demands occasional transplanting. Man's destiny is to move about on the face of the earth. If he stays in one spot like a tree or a gooseberry bush, he doesn't give himself a full chance.

It is good for the country boy to go into the city. It is good for the city boy to go into the country—it is good for each to study that which he has not seen.

As to the man remaining in the "station of his birth," that is impossible.

At his birth a human being is little better than a mass of putty. He is a poor, almost bald, toothless, deaf and blind little creature, unable to do anything for himself. From this "station of his birth," which is a condition of absolute helplessness and uselessness, he may develop to be one of the great men of the world. Or he may stop and pass his life at any one of a million intermediate stations. He may stop off in his progress, so to speak, at the first station, which is that of physical development and commonplace life.

The force we call ambition is a feeling not only of restlessness and desire for change and achievement, but especially a moral impulse to do good.

We all feel within ourselves a force stirring vaguely, indefinitely. We want to do something, and that desire to DO something, if it is based on desire to be useful to other people, may properly be called ambition.

The successful ambitious human being is the one that MAKES THE BEST POSSIBLE USE OF HIS OR HER POWERS.

The world is full of perverted emotion, improperly called ambition.

That perverted ambition is selfishness, vanity, baseless egotism that makes us refuse to do useful work that we might do because it does not seem important enough.

The young girl should be ambitious—in the future and in the present.

As to her future ambitions, she may let her mind roam as far as she will. If she wants to think of marrying a king, or marrying the little boy around the corner and making a king of HIM by her influence, let her do so. If she wants to think that she will combine the powers of Rachel, Jenny Lind and Bernhardt—that won't hurt her.

But she must have an ambition right in the present—a DEFINITE ambition.

She must make up her mind that she will do what she can to be useful in the house where she lives, and to SET A GOOD EXAMPLE wherever she may be.

Whatever good there is in small boys is usually based upon their admiration for girls of their own age. Girls should remember that they have an important work to do TODAY in influencing the minds of lads with whom they come in contact, and inspiring in such boys admiration of good character.

The young boy should be ambitious also.

And while he dreams occasionally of being President of the United States, knocking Dempsey senseless, or making the best flying machine, he must have for his present ambition something simpler and more feasible.

If his people are poor, the first ambition he should have is to support himself and help THEM.

If they are making a sacrifice to give him an education that will help all of them later, the boy's ambition should be to do everything in his work to be worthy of the kindness and the opportunity they are giving him.

Every boy, young man and young woman should have ambition to understand public affairs, and, if possible, to influence them. POWER LIES IN ALL OF THE PEOPLE.

Every boy, girl, young man and woman should study political affairs, understand public questions and be ambitious, in a little or big way, to help make this land a genuine republic, GOVERNED IN THE INTERESTS OF THE PEOPLE.

It is proper that young men and women should have a reasonable desire to accumulate money. Poverty is slavery.

But the making of money should be a secondary ambition. It is, properly speaking, not ambition at all—only a development of the instinct of self-preservation.

Real thought should dwell on the possibility of doing something entirely new which will be of benefit to all of the world—or of doing EXTREMELY WELL something that is necessary.

Encourage your own ambition, nurse it, AND MARK OUT A DEFINITE COURSE FOR IT.

Don't be afraid or ashamed to change the course of your ambition.

BUT HAVE A PLAN, and stick to it until you make up your mind that it was wrongly selected.

And remember this: No man is worth his salt who does not try to do something that will help OTHERS. Everything that we enjoy on this earth—comforts, luxury—we owe to the ambition of unselfish, brave men that lived here before us. Try to be like them, in a big or a little way, and good luck to you.

Should Doctors Take Life?

There is proposed a bill in the Danish Parliament in accordance with which a doctor is allowed to take human life when the patient is hopelessly ill and subject to severe inevitable suffering.

Under the present law, the taking of a patient's life, under any circumstances, is classed as murder or manslaughter.

There is in humanity an almost superstitious regard for the value of human life, and it is felt that to allow any class of men the right to take it, under any circumstances, is opening a fatal door for the entrance of crime.

The result of the passage of a law allowing human life to be taken, under certain circumstances, in Denmark, will be watched with interest.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By HELEN ROWLAND

MY Daughter, the sages have declared joyfully: "Hola, hola, hola! The men shall again predominate over women!" For lo, it hath come to pass that the world is more full of men than of women! Yea, of DOY children more are born each day than of GIRL children!

And, the women have said in their hearts, "Thank Heaven!"

Helen Rowland

But, alas, if their words be true, then where, oh WHERE have all the men hidden themselves from our eyes?

For, lo, I have sought them in the marriage markets. But husbands were still rarer than real Chippendale and harder to find than a new joke. And, for every eligible there were three debutantes.

And, behold, I have sought them in the ballroom. But the wall-flowers are still plentiful, and a dancing man is more coveted than the prize in a puzzle contest.

Yea, I have sought them in the tabernacles; but the churches were beautiful with women's hats and fine raiment, and there were but an handful of men to mar the ensemble.

And I have gone into the marts and the business offices. But there I found four stenographers to every clerk and two typists to each office boy.

Likewise, within the theatres, the women still predominated over the men. And the stage was filled with chorus-damsels, arrayed in knickers to resemble men, that the lack of masculinity might not be TOO obvious.

And in the shops and the market places I found NO men, but only women who served and women who bought.

Then I said, "Ha, ha! The sages were wrong! For this is still a woman's world, and the men are as lost who disappear, never to appear again!"

But the married women mocked me with ha-ha's and winkings, saying: "Oh, thou Foolish One, thou Innocent Dumbell! Wherefore dost thou seek the men in SERIOUS places?

"Go thou to the sporting field, even the links, and the gridiron and the baseball diamond. Yea, go to the poolroom, the chess table and the poker table! Seek them upon the indoor tennis court in Winter and beside the fishing stream in Summer! Seek them at the clubhouse and the lodge meeting!

"There shalt thou find all the men gathered together. For, lo, all men are PLAYFOYS! And at this moment half the men in the world are out upon the links playing golf and the other half are within the house, solving cross-word puzzles!

"Verily, verily, this IS a Woman's World! And, so long as they are permitted to play, the men are content that the women shall RUN it!"

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

He holds sway in the Kingdom of Laughter, he is Prince of the Pageant of Mirth; he jests, and the crowd trailing after sends the message broadcast over Earth. The man shrug at the sound of his chatter, as they speak of his calling with scorn, life without him would be a dull matter, the sun pale and the wide world forlorn. For he lifts up men's hearts on his pinions, as the exhilarant wings of a lark; he is wise, though the least of mirth's minions, and he gives to the toil-weary, rest. With scant honor he follows endow him, there's no dignity there to revere, but the highest among them allow him to give them a smile for a tear. He holds sway in the Kingdom of Laughter, though the least of mirth's minions, a clown; but the revellers following after, accord him a Fool's cap, for crown.

Hard Struggle

Helping Hand Editor:

Could any of your kind readers help me out. I am the mother of three children. Ever since my husband left home, five years ago, I have been working to keep them together. It was certainly a hard struggle, but none compared to now. Three months ago I had to leave my work on account of a nervous breakdown. Now the Winter is here and no coal and my rent unpaid for seven weeks, and no warm bedding, so you can imagine what a miserable condition we are in. My oldest boy, 16, was sick with rheumatism and it left him with a bad heart, so he can't help me any. If any one can help me with clothes for boy 16, such as a Winter coat, shoes 7½; boy 14 and girl 12 both need Winter coats and other warm clothing. I wear size 36, shoe 4½. Please don't forget us. MRS. C. 2.

Widow Sick a Year

Helping Hand Editor:

I am a widow and have been sick all the year. I am a seamstress by trade and have some of my work I want to put on the market, but have no means with which to do so. Won't some of the kind-hearted readers help me to accomplish this? ANNIE O.

Wants Music Records

Helping Hand Editor:

I am a nine-year-old invalid and can't go to any entertainments, and I am very fond of music. If any of your kind readers has some Columbia records I would love to have them. Have tried to get them in the stores, but they do not make them any more. E. P.

Lost On Chickens

Helping Hand Editor:

I am a disabled soldier and have had some bad luck. I raised 3,000 chickens this year and culled out all but 600 for eggs this Winter. Owing to the first cold spell and not proper housing, I lost all I had. So there is only one way for me to get on my feet and that is to ask the kind readers of your paper for help. I don't want anyone to give me money as a gift. I will repay every cent with interest. I have the incubators and some equipment. If I had my health I would go to work on a steady position until I saved enough, but I cannot work steady.

EDGAR H.

Grateful for Overcoat

Helping Hand Editor:

Please thank Mrs. C. for her kindness. My husband got a lovely overcoat, and the children got some clothing. My husband just started to work, and I guess we will get along all right now. Many thanks to you for having secured this help for us. MRS. C. S.

For Size 36

Helping Hand Editor:

Have a couple of jersey dresses, one house dress and bathrobe, which I will send to some woman wearing 36. MISS I. J.

Many thanks, Mrs. D. is greatly in need of clothing and will appreciate your offering.

WISHBONE IN PLACE OF BACKBONE

By DR. FRANK CRANE

TOO many people, said somebody, have their wishbone where their backbone ought to be.

In other words, they go through life continually wishing for great things, but have not the backbone to secure those great things.

Nothing valuable can be secured, as a rule, in a mere flush of enthusiasm.

It takes patience, forbearance and will power, to accomplish what we want.

Many a young person, for instance, has gone to the city with the intention to study art or music or some such thing. And things have not broken right for them and they have found impediments and obstacles and have become discouraged. They have not enough backbone to counterbalance their wishbone.

The prizes of this life go, as a rule, to those who are able to stick.

This is true in business. The shores of the business stream are littered with the wrecks of those who have come to grief. They were not able to stick or were not intelligent enough to make provision for sticking. The first great storm that arose was fatal to them.

Those who have succeeded in business, as a rule, are those who have doggedly stuck to their task until by and by Fortune smiled upon them.

For Fortune is a peculiar lass. Those who are afraid of her she is cruel toward. Those who flout her and kick her and disregard her she will bullily come to fawn upon.

It is well to have great desires and great ambitions, but, unless this is balanced by great staying powers, one is apt to be like a rocket, up in a flare of glory and down like a stick.

In all human relations no one finds people exactly as he wants them. We must trim our wishes to suit the actualities. We must come down from the ideals that we have pictured to ourselves to the realities as they are.

This is oftentimes a slow and difficult progress. For one of the hardest things to do is to adapt our wishes to things as we find them.

WHY THE EARTH GOES IN ELLIPSE

By Garrett P. Serviss

"The force of gravitation varying inversely as the square of the distance, how and why can a planet's orbit be any other than a perfect circle?—R. S. D."

IN order to travel in a perfectly circular orbit a planet would have to move, at every point of its orbit, at exactly a right angle to the line (radius vector) joining it with the sun, and also at a particular speed determined by the distance and the attractive force of the sun. Since there is no planet that travels in a perfect circle we may conclude that the requisite conditions for the production of circular motion did not prevail with any of them at the beginning of their course.

Their motion in ellipses instead of circles does not affect the operation of the law that the force holding them in their orbits varies inversely as the square of the distance from the sun.

In our cut we have a circle and an ellipse drawn about the sun, the focus of the ellipse being the center of the circle, and the radius of the latter equal to half of the major, i. e., longer, axis of the ellipse.

A planet starting at the point marked S, and moving at a right angle to the direction of the sun, with a speed which, at that particular distance, would correspond to motion in a circle (acceleration equal V2-P), would continue to go round the sun in the circular orbit, at a uniform speed, traveling equal distances in equal times.

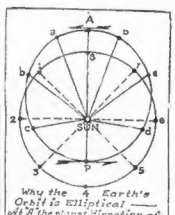
Suppose we divide the whole orbit into eight equal parts, the planet in the circle arriving successively at the points 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, and so back to S.

Now consider a planet starting at A with a velocity too small to accord with circular motion around the sun. Then the sun's attraction would draw it out of a circle, and, its speed being relatively small, it would go to A in the time during which the planet in the circle went to 1.

Since it is approaching the sun, the latter is continually increasing its speed, so that, from a it will go to b, in the time that the planet in the circle takes to go from 1 to 2. The next step is from b to c, while the other goes from 2 to 3; and the next from c to P, where it overtakes the other, which is then at 4, in proximation of the line A-P, which represents the major axis of the ellipse, A being the "Aphelion" and P the "Perihelion."

After it has arrived at P its speed is so great that during the second half of the circuit it will keep ahead of the other, but it will gradually lose until both arrive together again at the starting point—the one at A and the other simultaneously at S. This can be seen by following out the successive stations from P and from A, on the right-hand side of the diagram.

While the movement in the circular orbit is uniform throughout, that in the ellipse is continually accelerated, first positively and then negatively. It travels slowest at A and fastest at P.



Why the Earth's Orbit is Elliptical — At A the planet's direction of motion is right for a circular orbit, but its speed is too small. At P its direction is again right, but its speed is too great.

At A its speed is too small to maintain it in a circle, and it begins to approach the sun; at P its speed is too great for movement in a circle, and there it begins to recede from the sun. But now the sun holds it back and the circumstances of its motion on the right-hand side of the orbit are the exact reverse of those on the left-hand side, so that it travels back to A in precisely the other half of the same ellipse that it followed in going to P.

And, wherever it may be in its orbit, the sun's attraction upon it varies inversely with the square of the distance. Since the distance of the planet in the circle never changes, it experiences always the same attraction. But if it were suddenly thrown into a different circle, the attraction would be correspondingly changed in accordance with the inverse square of the new distance.

COMPOSE YOUR MIND FOR PEACEFUL SLEEP

Do thoughts race through your mind after you retire until your mental and physical condition becomes such that you cannot sleep?

Night after night you waste a lot of good sleeping time because your mind runs rampant without effort on your part to control it.

Many of your thoughts are but little worries magnified to the size of mountainous troubles.

There is something about the environment of a dark room which makes one prone to operate the mind at terrific speed and causes the imagination to draw pictures which could not be presented under any other conditions.

To give the mind full sway after you retire is a dangerous and usually harmful practice, because it drives away refreshing sleep.

The longer the night-thinking habit is indulged, the harder to rid yourself of it.

You cannot begin too soon to put your mind at rest after you retire.

If your best thinking time is at night, let it be before you retire.

When you go to bed let it be with the intention of sleep and then sleep.
